LEIST APPOINTED DISPOSAL PLANT SUPERINTENDENT

Circleville Service Chief Announces Selection
For $150 Post

THREE OPERATORS HIRED

Definite Date Of Opening Sewage Treatment Work
Not Determined

Ervin Leist, Seyfert avenue, was appointed Thursday by L. E. Miller, service director, as chemist-superintendent of Circleville's new municipal disposal plant. Mr. Leist is the son of C. O. Leist, former councilman.

Mr. Leist was graduated from Circleville high school in 1926. He then attended Capital university where he received his bachelor of science in chemistry degree in 1932. Mr. Leist has been employed since 1935 in a part-time position in the laboratory at the Eshelman mill. Previously, he had been employed at the Container Corporation of America in the laboratory and in the inspecting department.

Three Operators Named

Three operators were appointed by Mr. Miller. They are Charles H. Eitel, 517 N. Pickaway street; Roy E. Helwagen, 927 S. Washington street, and Arthur O. Stein, 118 Pleasant street.

The three men appointed as operators were selected in accordance with grades received in the civil service examinations for the position. Pearl Delong, 367 Watt street, who received a high grade in the examination, requested that he be eliminated in making appointments as he had secured another position.

Under an ordinance passed by council the chemist-superintendent's salary is fixed at $150 a month and those of the operators at $90 a month. These salaries will be increased, councilmen explained, as the men become acquainted with the operation of the plant.

Starting Date Indefinite

Although the city has been informed that the plant can be placed in operation March 1, no definite date has been established for the employees to start on their positions. Operation of the plant is under the supervision of the service director.

TOLEDO STUDENT SHOT IN CHEST DURING STROLL

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Feb. 16—William Spurrier, Toledo, O., sophomore in the University of Illinois college of engineering, was shot through the chest and seriously wounded early today while passing the Pullman hotel in Champaign.

Glass fell on the sidewalk. A moment later the report of a gun was heard and Spurrier clutching his chest, shouting: "I'm shot."

He was taken to the Burnham city hospital where his condition was pronounced critical. Klug said he thought the shot came from the hotel.

DOUBLE MURDER, SUICIDE PROBED

Mansfield Authorities Say
Former Recorder Killed Wife And Daughter

MANSFIELD, Feb. 16—Although circumstances indicated it was a double murder and suicide, police today continued their investigation into the triple butcher-knife slaying of Mr. and Mrs. John Woerth and their daughter, Loretta, of Mansfield.

Relatives called by a neighbor discovered the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Woerth in the basement of their home. Their throats had been slashed in the same manner as that of the daughter, whose body was discovered in a second floor bedroom.

Police found a kitchen knife beside the body of Woerth, 62 year old insurance salesman and former Richland county recorder. Mrs. Woerth was 60 and the daughter 25.

Coroner Hugh C. Winbiger was expected to return a verdict today. He, too, believed it may have been a case of murder and suicide.

Following an investigation, Police Chief Meade K. Bates expressed the belief that the crime occurred in this way:

Woerth returned home late yesterday and struck his wife while she was ironing in the kitchen. As she fled to the basement, he followed her and slashed her throat with the knife.

While the daughter slept, Woerth then crept up stairs and killed her. Returning to the basement, he then ended his own life. No motive was advanced for the crime, but police asserted Woerth had been having business difficulties.

SINGER'S FIGHT FOR DAUGHTER HITS LEGAL SNAG

NEW YORK, Feb. 16—Marion Talley's suit to recover custody of her four year old daughter, Susan, was considerably complicated today by a number of legal tangles.

First, the lawyer representing Adolph G. Eckstrom, her husband, said he had been unable to locate Miss Talley, the opera singer and screen actress, to serve her with papers in a separation suit.

Then, Miss Talley's lawyer filed a memorandum stating he was unable to serve Eckstrom with papers in the habeas corpus action brought by her.

Meanwhile, a minor mystery developed over Susan's birthplace. Eckstrom's secretary and attorney said the child was born in St. Paul, Minn. Minnesota authorities claimed her name was not on the birth register.

BANDITS OBTAIN $30,000 IN LOOT

Two Norwalk, Conn., Bank Messengers Accosted
By Five Robbers

NORWALK, Conn., Feb. 16—Five armed bandits today held up and robbed two bank messengers of between $30,000 and $40,000 in Federal Reserve bank notes today as the messengers walked out of the South Norwalk postoffice.

Police Sergeant John H. Toothill was slugged with the butt end of a gun by one of the bandits when he attempted to interfere.

The two bank messengers, who had just received the mail shipment reportedly destined for the City National Bank of Norwalk, were trapped by the bandits as they stepped from the postoffice.

Each of the five men had a gun and the messengers were "covered" before they could make a move toward their own weapons.

The messengers were quickly stripped of their packages by the armed quintet who then tumbled into an automobile, which waited with motor idling at the curb, and sped away.

A passing motorist who skidded his own car around and sought to trail the fleeing machine was outdistanced within a few minutes. He reported the bandit car was traveling at approximately 75 miles an hour.

Connecticut, Massachusetts and New York state police were flashed teletype alarms and police details took to the roads in automobile cruisers to establish a highway blockade.

Circleville residents suffered from bitter cold Thursday when the mercury fell to nine degrees.

The low recording was a drop of 26 degrees from the high of 35 Wednesday afternoon. The weather bureau predicted the cold wave would remain throughout the day with slightly higher temperatures Thursday night.

The cold weather curbed the rise in the Scioto river. Observers said the stream was receding rapidly Thursday after flooding the lowest bottom lands.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16—Hope that the siege of frigid weather would check the wave of influenza and winter cois in the Midwest was expressed today as the mercury stayed under the freezing mark in most sections.

With the latest reading only 10 degrees above zero continued cold was in store for Chicago where more than 100,000 school children were found yesterday to be still absent from their classes.

TRAFFIC LIGHT TO BE KEPT ON FOR ENTIRE DAY

Council favors the traffic light at Court and Mill streets being operated throughout the day, and not only during school hours.

The two new lights, one at Court and Mill and the other at Court and Corwin, were purchased through funds provided by the Circleville lodge B. P. O. Elks and the city. Current for one light will be paid for by the board of education and for the other by the city.

The light at Court and Mill street is considered the city's light, councilmen were told. It was believed that the operation of this light throughout the day would eliminate the necessity of a school or city employee making six trips to turn the light on and off for periods when children would be going to and from school, and would control traffic on the street to a better advantage.

Council instructed Karl Herrmann, safety director, to give this information to the board of education.

Councilman Ben Gordon said he had received a suggestion from a motorist that signs be placed on the lights explaining that they were operated only during school hours.

CENSORSHIP PUT ON STUDENT DAILY AT O.S.U. DURING PROBE

James E. Pollard, Director Of Journalism, Silent About Clamp

COLUMBUS, Feb. 16—On the eve of a probe into asserted un-American activities on the campus, the Ohio State University Lantern, official school paper, was placed under a strict 48-hour censorship today.

The censorship was imposed, it was learned, by James E. Pollard, director of the school of journalism. Asked for comment, Pollard remarked, "I have nothing to say on the subject. Whatever happens on the Lantern is my responsibility."

Despite Pollard's reluctance to talk it was learned that university authorities were irked because the Lantern, editorially and otherwise, bitterly condemned action of the Franklin County American Legion in asking for an investigation of the alleged un-American activities.

Probe Opens Friday

The university's own probe into the charges is scheduled to start tomorrow morning with three trustees conducting the hearing.

It was learned from reliable sources that the Lantern, through its columnists and editorial writers, planned another blast today at the investigation. The censorship ban was inflicted to cover editorials, columns, newsmatter and sports.

Normally the students run the paper the way they see fit, printing whatever they deem advisable. It was the first time within recollection that such action had been taken.

In connection with the Red probe, it was learned that hundreds of handbills were distributed on the campus yesterday in which the legion was attacked and which were addressed to all "Students and Workers." The handbills bore the signature of the "Revolutionary Workers League," with headquarters at 2071 East 30th street, Cleveland.

ENVOY OF NAZIS URGES CARE IN CHOICE OF POPE

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 16—Dr. Diego Von Bergen, German ambassador to the Vatican, today advised the cardinals gathering for the conclave which will begin March 1 to elect a "world successor" to Pope Pius XI.

The German envoy addressed the numbering 40 but with more en route to Rome, when the congregation received the Vatican diplomatic corps. Von Bergen spoke for nine ambassadors, 14 ministers and seven charged d' affaires representing 30 nations.

Referring to present conditions in Europe and elsewhere, Von Bergen said:

"A new world is evolving with evolution of the pacific nature. The papacy undoubtedly has an important share in this evolution. Great responsibility lays on the College of Cardinals in electing a world successor."

The German envoy reviewed the various phases and activities of the life of the late Pope Pius and lauded his great courage during the Warsaw crisis when he was papal nuncio to Poland.

Von Bergen also extolled Pius as a "man careless of his life in defending the interests of the church."

FLORIDA YEGGS ESCAPE POLICE WITH BIG LOOT

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 16—Police moved in confused circles today in their search for the will-o'-the-wisp bandit gang that vanished after taking about $200,000 worth of cash and jewels from the swanky Blackstone hotel vaults early yesterday.

Investigators said the five robbers had apparently planned their getaway with the same care they used in looting the strong boxes.

The smashed open only fourteen of the 100 or more boxes in the vault and slipped far down the line to empty one belonging to Mrs. Antonio Marko of New York, widow of a wealthy fuel company executive, who reported a loss of $75,000 in gems to police.

It was this seemingly intimate knowledge of the locations of the safe deposit boxes and their contents that provided investigators with their best clue.

It was almost certain, they said, that the bandits had some inside knowledge of the setup, and the lists of former employees were scanned to determine if any might have tipped off the gang.

Armed with machine guns and revolvers, the robbers made no attempt to conceal their own faces but none was recognized by the hotel employees and guests, who were rounded up and held prisoners while the marauders worked.

PRESIDENT TO LEAVE BY SPECIAL TRAIN FOR SOUTH

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—President Roosevelt "cleared the decks" at the White House today preliminary to stepping aboard the deck of a navy cruiser bound for war maneuvers in the Caribbean sea.

Recovered from an attack of grippe that confined him to his room for nearly a week, the President will leave by special train tonight for Florida. Saturday afternoon at Key West, as commander-in-chief of the nation's "front line defense," he will be piped over the side of the U. S. S. Houston and head to a point somewhere east of Puerto Rico for a rendezvous with the fighting fleet.

Admiral William H. Leahy, chief of naval operations, was accompanying Mr. Roosevelt South. In their official capacities they will sit with the board of umpires that will determine, through theoretical solutions of a grim war problem, whether the American navy is adequate to repel a European invasion.

Ambassador To Berlin May Tell Version Of Situation In Europe

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—In a spirit of war-time patriotism, the senate today received the house-passed $376,000,000 army aviation expansion bill and kept its spotlight on President Roosevelt's foreign policy.

The bill, which also carries funds for strengthening Panama Canal defenses, was assured of senate passing. The senate military affairs committee will begin considering its provisions Friday.

It was this committee, locked in bitter controversy over the administration's aid to France and England in buying American war planes, that was investigating the circumstances in which an official French air mission shopped for modern planes in the United States from last October until this week.

Under fire from both Republicans and Democrats for what they claimed to be "indefensible secrecy" in aiding the French and British, the committee today was preparing to make public the current testimony on the matter. All reference to military secrets will be deleted.

Hugh Wilson Called

A surprising turn in the investigation came when the committee, on the motion of Senator Bridges (R) of New Hampshire, had voted to invite Hugh Wilson, American ambassador to Germany, to appear before the committee. Since the senate and house military affairs committees had been told in secret by Joseph P. Kennedy, ambassador to Great Britain, and William C. Bullitt, ambassador to France, of the critical situation in Europe, Bridges called for Wilson's appearance to obtain his version of the affairs abroad.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, as well as top-ranking army and navy officers, were called before the committee again today for further questioning about their connection with the French mission. ## SPOKANE FLIER SAFE; UNINJURED IN PLANE CRASH

SPOKANE, Wash., Feb. 16—Roy Schreck, Spokane weather pilot, was home today with only a pair of swollen feet to remind him of his three-day struggle against cold and hunger in the rugged mountains of north Idaho.

Glad he had not surrendered to the hopelessness which engulfed him after his plane crashed on a snow-covered mountain top last Sunday, Schreck was welcomed at his Spokane apartment by the wife who had given him up for dead.

Miraculously unhurt after his ice-covered plane skimmed tree tops and then crashed on an Idaho peak, Schreck trudged nearly 25 miles through deep snow, finally reaching a woodcutter's cabin yesterday.

"I guess it just wasn't my time," he said. "I don't know why I didn't give up, but I'm glad I didn't. I certainly felt like it lots of times."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—Senate investigation of fundamental causes of unemployment was proposed today by Senator Hatch, (D) of New Mexico. Hatch, a member of the senate unemployment and relief committee, said there can be no stabilized economy on a high plane so long as wide-spread unemployment exists.

McCall is under sentence to die for the kidnapping and slaying of 5 year old Jimmy Cash Jr., at Princeton, Fla., last Spring.

COURT DISPUTE OVER LIGHT RATE NEARS DECISION

A tentative date for a hearing on the city's motion in the domestic and commercial light rate controversy with the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Company has been set.

Carl C. Leist, solicitor, told councilmen Wednesday night that the hearing has been assigned for March 6 if that date is satisfactory with counsel for the company and Judge Phil Henderson of Logan.

Mr. Leist said Judge Henderson would be asked to hear the motion.

The solicitor filed a motion to strike from the petition, make it more definite and certain and state the cause of action.

The case entered Common Pleas court in August in 1937. The utility obtained a restraining order preventing council from taking action on referendum petitions against the rate ordinance passed by council.

This injunction restrained W. J. Graham, then mayor, from presenting the referendum petitions to council, council from voting an ordinance to provide for the submission of the proposition to voters, and from certifying the petition to the board of elections.

The ordinance offered a lower schedule of rates under a 10-year contract. Proceedings were filed by the city to have the difference between the rates charged and those offered impounded until the case was finally decided.

FLORIDA YEGGS ESCAPE POLICE WITH BIG LOOT

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 16—Police moved in confused circles today in their search for the will-o'-the-wisp bandit gang that vanished after taking about $200,000 worth of cash and jewels from the swanky Blackstone hotel vaults early yesterday.

Investigators said the five robbers had apparently planned their getaway with the same care they used in looting the strong boxes.

The smashed open only fourteen of the 100 or more boxes in the vault and skipped far down the line to empty one belonging to Mrs. Antonio Marko of New York, widow of a wealthy fuel company executive, who reported a loss of $75,000 in gems to police.

It was this seemingly intimate knowledge of the locations of the safe deposit boxes and their contents that provided investigators with their best clue.

It was almost certain, they said, that the bandits had some inside knowledge of the setup, and the lists of former employees were scanned to determine if any might have tipped off the gang.

Armed with machine guns and revolvers, the robbers made no attempt to conceal their own faces but none was recognized by the hotel employees and guests, who were rounded up and held prisoners while the marauders worked.

PRESIDENT TO LEAVE BY SPECIAL TRAIN FOR SOUTH

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—President Roosevelt "cleared the decks" at the White House today preliminary to stepping aboard the deck of a navy cruiser bound for war maneuvers in the Caribbean sea.

Recovered from an attack of gripe that confined him to his room for nearly a week, the President will leave by special train tonight for Florida. Saturday afternoon at Key West, as commander-in-chief of the nation's "front line defense," he will be piped over the side of the U. S. S. Houston and head to a point somewhere east of Puerto Rico for a rendezvous with the fighting fleet.

Admiral William H. Leahy, chief of naval operations, was accompanying Mr. Roosevelt South. In their official capacities they will sit with the board of umpire that will determine, through theoretical solutions of a grim war problem, whether the American navy is adequate to repel a European invasion.

HUGH WILSON SUMMONED

Ambassador To Berlin May Tell Version Of Situation In Europe

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—In a spirit of war-time patriotism, the senate today received the house-passed $376,000,000 army aviation expansion bill and kept its spotlight on President Roosevelt's foreign policy.

The bill, which also carries funds for strengthening Panama Canal defenses, was assured of senate passing. The senate military affairs committee will begin considering its provisions Friday.

It was this committee, locked in bitter controversy over the administration's aid to France and England in buying American war planes, that was investigating the circumstances in which an official French air mission shipped for modern planes in the United States from last October until this week.

Under fire from both Republicans and Democrats for what they claimed to be "indefensible secrecy" in aiding the French and British, the committee today was preparing to make public the current testimony on the matter. All reference to military secrets will be deleted.

Hugh Wilson Called

A surprising turn in the investigation came when the committee, on the motion of Senator Bridges (R) of New Hampshire, had voted to invite Hugh Wilson, American ambassador to Germany, to appear before the committee. Since the senate and house military affairs committees had been told in secret by Joseph P. Kennedy, ambassador to Great Britain, and William C. Bullitt, ambassador to France, of the critical situation in Europe, Bridges called for Wilson's appearance to obtain his version of the affairs abroad.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, as well as top-ranking army and navy officers, were called before the committee again today for further questioning about their connection with the French mission. The mission has placed orders for (Continued on Page Eight)

SPOKANE FLIER SAFE; UNINJURED IN PLANE CRASH

SPOKANE, Wash., Feb. 16—Roy Schreck, Spokane weather pilot, was home today with only a pair of swollen feet to remind him of his three-day struggle against cold and hunger in the rugged mountains of north Idaho. Glad he had not surrendered to the hopelessness which engulfed him after his plane crashed on a snow-covered mountain top last Sunday, Schreck was welcomed at his Spokane apartment by the wife who had given him up for dead.

Miraculously unhurt after his ice-covered plane skimmed tree tops and then crashed on an Idaho peak, Schreck trudged nearly 25 miles through deep snow, finally reaching a woodcutter's cabin yesterday.

"I guess it just wasn't my time," he said. "I don't know why I didn't give up, but I'm glad I didn't. I certainly felt like it lots of times."

RELIEF STUDY ASKED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—Senate investigation of fundamental causes of unemployment was proposed today by Senator Hatch, (D) of New Mexico. Hatch, a member of the senate unemployment and relief committee, said there can be no stabilized economy on a high plane so long as wide-spread unemployment exists.

RATES APPROVED FOR ADJUSTMENT OF CROP PRICES

Wheat Fixed At 11 And Corn At 6 Cents For Next Year

KRUSE LISTS FIGURES

Single Acre Over Man's Allotment Would Take Away Parity

Rates for price adjustment payments for wheat in Pickaway county, and for corn in the commercial area under the 1939 Agricultural Adjustment Administration were announced Thursday as 11 cents for wheat and 6 cents for corn, by Elmer F. Kruse, Chairman of the Agricultural Conservation Committee.

"These price adjustment payments are an additional payment in the 1939 farm program," Mr. Kruse said. "They are provided for by the price adjustment act of 1938 which authorizes $212,000,000 to be paid to cooperators in the 1939 program."

"Payments will be made in addition to the general conservation payments earned through growing special crops within their acreage allotments, and through the carrying out of soil building practices."

"Parity payments to winter wheat producers who became eligible as of December 15, will be made this Spring," Mr. Kruse said.

He added that if a farmer exceeds either his wheat or corn allotment by only one acre it will mean loss of the parity payments for the entire crop, plus deductions on the number of acres in excess of the allotment.

In explaining the provisions of the price adjustment act, Mr. Kruse said that, "to be eligible for a price adjustment payment a person must have an interest as a landlord, tenant or share-cropper in a farm for which an acreage allotment has been established for the commodity, under the 1939 program."

The payment for a farm will be divided among the landlords, tenants and share-croppers in the same proportion that the crop is divided at the time application is made for the parity payment, he said.

The payment is made on the normal yield per acre of the allotment established for the farm.

NEW HOLLANDER TO SERVE TIME IN OHIO PRISON

Failure to comply with a Common Pleas court probation granted last March 3 resulted in Fletcher K. Brown, 38, of New Holland, receiving a sentence of one to three years in the penitentiary Wednesday afternoon.

Brown had been placed on a one-year probation on a non-support charge involving two children. He was ordered to pay for the support of the children and report regularly to the prosecutor. Prosecutor George E. Gerhardt said he failed to comply with the probation terms. Brown was bound to the grand jury on Feb. 6 on a charge of issuing a worthless check.

Chaplin Working 18 Hours Daily On 'The Dictator', First Movie Since '36

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 16—Charlie Chaplin is working 18 hours a day as he prepares to begin production of his first movie since 1936.

Late into the night lights burn either at his home or his picturesque studio on Sunset boulevard. Chaplin never has been satisfied to do one man's work. He is a whole studio staff in himself. When he made "Modern Times," as an example, he starred, produced, directed, wrote the story, composed the music and edited the picture.

He'll do even better than that in his next, "The Dictator." He'll do all the other things and play a dual role besides. So you can see why he's getting very little sleep these days.

Actual production begins March 15. Chaplin's stages have been wired for sound for the first time. He talks in this picture. Pretentious settings are nearing completion.

And in the center of everything is Chaplin.

R. K. O. is having a little trouble with the Will Hays office over "Love Affair," which promises to be one of the year's outstanding pictures. Directed by Leo McCarey, who turned out "The Awful Truth" and many other hits, it is rather a frank story co-starring Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer.

One of the particular scenes to which the Hays office has taken umbrage is one in which Boyer is talking about love. Irene remarks:

"Do you think it will ever take the place of baseball as America's national pastime?" That exchange is out definitely. R. K. O. expects to meet the other few objections in time to give the picture its first showing next Monday night.

A few weeks back Paramount was in difficulty with the Hays office over "Zaza." The objection was to Claudette Colbert dancing the "can-can." The dance was eliminated.

Even though the girls are very scantily clad in Turkish costumes, Paramount's latest dancing is all art. It's for Jack Benny's new picture, "Man About Town." The Abbot girls are performing on a large stage. It is so large the studio had to drain the tank in which many thrilling sea scenes have been filmed to make room for it.

Even Marc Sandrich, who has directed Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire, is thrilled by the performance of this troupe.

There will be an overabundance of girls in the picture. The next to work will be the 20 beauties selected by George Petty, the artist. They appear in a harem sequence. For the sake of the unusual, part of the costumes is made of brass tubing. So, when the girls are fitted, they go to the machine shop instead of the dress-makers.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16—Congress should amend the Social Security Act to pay its retirement benefits more on a need basis, with sizably larger benefits than are scheduled beginning in 1940 instead of 1942, as provided.

These steps to rectify what he considers flaws in the government's gigantic old age pension law were advocated today by Prof. Paul H. Douglas, noted University of Chicago economist, in an exclusive interview.

Prof. Douglas coupled his recommendations, which would include pension benefits to widows and orphans and, if possible, to the permanently disabled, with a statement that they can be brought about without any additional cost in the long run.

Suggested Revisions

To make up for the additional expenditures, he would (1) vastly reduce the so-called social security reserve fund scheduled to reach 47 billion dollars in 1980, (2) decrease maximum benefit payments from $85 a month to $55 or $60 a month, and (3) decrease death benefits.

Prof. Douglas' recommendations followed those made in more general terms recently by the United States Senate's Advisory Council on Social Security, of which Douglas was a member, representing the public. Industry and labor also were represented.

"I favor a contingency reserve fund of perhaps 10 or 12 billion dollars, invested in government securities, to prevent any sudden fluctuations in the payroll taxes the amount of benefits," he declared.

"However, I do not see that much would be gained by allowing the reserve to reach a sum like 47 billion dollars. There would always be a temptation to put the extra money into non-productive public works. We do nothing to expand the national income and the tax base for future generations when we build postoffices."

Huge Reserve Fund

The reserve fund, now somewhat over a billion dollars, is slated to be built up during years when wage and payroll taxes are being collected, as at present, but few benefits are being paid because few or none of the insured have reached the retirement age, 65 years.

Social security taxes are scheduled to far exceed expenditures up to 1970, after which annual deficits will begin.

"By lowering the old age account (reserve) to a contingency level, we can spend much more in the early years of the program and fill a pressing social need," Prof. Douglas said.

He recommended that retired pensioners whose wives are dependent upon them, and who are also 65 years old, be granted a pension equal to 50 percent of their pension in addition.

The first pensions are to approximate $17 a month. This provision would bring such pensions to about $24, which would be above the allowances of most of the state "charity" pension allowances, ranging from $6.37 a month in Mississippi to $32.39 in California.

First pensions are to be low because those who receive them will have paid little in taxes. In raising them on a basis of need, Prof. Douglas would go further to cut down the maximums on a need

On the screen is that furious action picture of the sky, "Pirates of the Sky", starring Rochelle Hudson, Kent Taylor and Ray Walker. Feature Number two stars George O'Brien in "Arizona Legion."

AT THE CIRCLE

Right up on top of your "must-be seen" list goes "Dawn Patrol," Warner Bros. thrilling document of British wartime aviation, which begins Saturday night at the Circle and continues through Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The great cast headed by Errol Flynn and including David Niven, Basil Rathbone and Donald Crisp, plus some of the most breath-taking aerial combat scenes ever taken, all serve to make "The Dawn Patrol" one of the most important offerings of the season.

Flynn, playing the dashing Courtney, who together with Niven, form a pair of hell-for-leather flying fools of the British Royal Flying Corps, continue day after day, night after night, to wreak havoc with the enemy while death takes its toll regularly among their less experienced comrades.

When finally Flynn is grounded after being promoted to command of the 59th squadron, and is forced soon after to send Niven's green kid brother to his death in the air, Niven turns on his old buddy and renounces him. Now Flynn, in a great sequence, takes over Niven's death sentence assignment in a great lone foray in enemy territory, creates a climatic moment which for sheer pulse-pounding drama has yet to be equalled.

Prices on the Circleville livestock auction Wednesday were about steady with those of the previous week.

Good steers and heifers ranged from $8.50 to $9.15. Medium to good sold from $7 to $8.50. No choice cattle were run through the sale.

Good to choice hogs weighing from 180 to 240 pounds sold from $8.20 to $8.35. Lights went as high

There is an urgent need for benefits to the permanently disabled because, unlike other need groups, they are not covered by other divisions of the Social Security program, he said.

He recommended inclusion of domestic servants, farm laborers, and employees of charitable institutions—a total of about 5,500,000 workers now exempt—in the taxing and benefit program.

Death benefits as provided in the present law, returning to a man's estate the amount he has paid in taxes with compound interest, would virtually be eliminated.

In their place would be the provisions for widows and orphans, and also a "burial allowance." The "burial allowance" would probably be about $200.

Strict Enforcement Of Pension Law is Decreed

COLUMBUS, Feb. 16—Strict adherence to the provision calling for quarterly re-investigation of each recipient on Ohio's old age pension rolls was ordered by Tom McCaw, new chief of the state division of aid for the aged.

Mr. McCaw said that in the past laxity in re-investigating pensions at least once every three months probably had cost the state thousands of dollars which could have been saved and utilized in providing assistance to many applicants who in the past have been unable to receive aid because of lack of funds.

Under the previous administration, among the allegations made by the U. S. Social Security Board which caused federal funds to be cut off from the state last October was the charge that pension officials had not carried on thorough re-investigations on a quarterly basis.

McCaw said that since he assumed the position as pension chief he had been informed that while periodic visits were conducted among recipients in some counties, there were other localities in the state where some recipients had not been visited for the past two years.

McCaw pointed out that from the standpoint of efficient operation of the division it was imperative that periodic visits be made in the future in order to insure that aged persons in actual need were receiving the benefits intended from the program.

He expressed the view that lack of contact between the division's offices and recipients would permit persons who had no business receiving aid from the state in being granted payments.

"In a program as large as Ohio's with 112,000 aged receiving aid and with limited funds available for the purpose only through closer contact with recipients will it be possible to conserve our available funds so that we can help the largest number of aged persons actually in need," McCaw said.

"Lack of re-investigation has undoubtedly resulted in some people whose circumstances have changed for the better since they were placed on the rolls in continuing to receive aid while people in actual dire need have had to wait because funds were lacking to care for them," he added.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16—Congress should amend the Social Security Act to pay its retirement benefits more on a need basis, with sizably larger benefits than are scheduled beginning in 1940 instead of 1942, as provided.

These steps to rectify what he considers flaws in the government's gigantic old age pension law were advocated today by Prof. Paul H. Douglas, noted University of Chicago economist, in an exclusive interview.

Prof. Douglas coupled his recommendations, which would include pension benefits to widows and orphans and, if possible, to the permanently disabled, with a statement that they can be brought about without any additional cost in the long run.

Suggested Revisions
To make up for the additional expenditures, he would (1) vastly reduce the so-called social security reserve fund scheduled to reach 47 billion dollars in 1980, (2) decrease maximum benefit payments from $85 a month to $55 or $60 a month, and (3) decrease death benefits.

Prof. Douglas' recommendations followed those made in more general terms recently by the United States Senate's Advisory Council on Social Security, of which Douglas was a member, representing the public. Industry and labor also were represented.

"I favor a contingency reserve fund of perhaps 10 or 12 billion dollars, invested in government securities, to prevent any sudden fluctuations in the payroll taxes the amount of benefits," he declared.

"However, I do not see that much would be gained by allowing the reserve to reach a sum like 47 billion dollars. There would always be a temptation to put the extra money into non-productive public works. We do nothing to expand the national income and the tax base for future generations when we build postoffices."

Huge Reserve Fund

The reserve fund, now somewhat over a billion dollars, is slated to be built up during years when wage and payroll taxes are being collected, as at present, but few benefits are being paid because few or none of the insured have reached the retirement age, 65 years.

Social security taxes are scheduled to far exceed expenditures up to 1970, after which annual deficits will begin.

"By lowering the old age account (reserve) to a contingency level, we can spend much more in the early years of the program and fill a pressing social need," Prof. Douglas said.

He recommended that retired pensioners whose wives are dependent upon them, and who are also 65 years old, be granted a pension equal to 50 percent of their pension in addition.

The first pensions are to approximate $17 a month. This provision would bring such pensions to about $24, which would be above the allowances of most of the state "charity" pension allowances, ranging from $6.37 a month in Mississippi to $32.39 in California.

KEY INDUSTRIES IN REICH READY FOR ANY CRISIS

Economic Life Permeated By Soldierly Spirit, Secretary Says

HOUSING DANGER CITED
New Motor Roads, Mighty Fortifications Built For Emergencies

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—Hitler's Third Reich in 1939 is expected to reach such widespread preparedness for the event of war that, figuratively speaking, all national industry can be completely harnessed to the war machine overnight through pressing of a button.

In the words of Rudolf Brinkmann State Secretary of the Reich Ministry of Economics, "it can be said without presumption that no other country in the world surpasses Germany in the systematic adjustment of economic life to military requirements". Herr Brinkmann added: "German economic life is completely permeated by soldierly spirit."

In a gigantic peace-time effort, the Third Reich is placing its key industries on what practically amounts to a wartime basis, permitting in an emergency complete industrial mobilization in the shortest possible time. Each of these industries is supervised by a special commissioner working in close co-operation with Field Marshal Goering's Four Year Plan staff. The motor vehicle industry is working under Colonel von Schell, who in his army career won a reputation as a highly efficient organizer.

Construction Division

Building and construction is placed under Dr. Fritz Todt, who holds a commission as a major in the reserve. Under his wing are the new motor roads and the western fortifications. The machine industry is entrusted to Dr. Karl Lange, while iron and steel production is under the supervision of Major-General von Hanneken.

As a first measure Colonel von Schell ordered the standardization of motor lorries and their restriction to three types, of one and a half tons, of three tons, and five tons. German automobile factories are ordered to concentrate their efforts on producing the best type of truck in each class. The most satisfactory truck models will serve as standard types for truck production throughout Germany. The standardization of passenger cars is also taken in hand, the aim being to reduce some 135 types to fifteen types.

With all efforts concentrated on completing the forty-miles deep fortification works stretching from the Dutch to the Swiss border, and on pushing forward work on the motor roads whose strategical value is of equal importance, the building of houses in Germany has been somewhat neglected.

Housing Shortage Grows

A year ago it was estimated that Germany needed one million more houses, and now the shortage is put at two millions. The sharp increase is to a large extent due to the huge Government and Nazi party buildings now being erected under the supervision of Dr. Todt, which necessitate the demolition of large blocks of flats.

The German machine industry is being adjusted to military needs by Dr. Lange, a member of the board of directors of the National Association of Machine Construction. This branch of industry is to help reduce the lack of workers by substituting machine power for man power. Dr. Lange has ordered that "self sufficiency in spare parts and raw materials be attained to the highest possible extent."

For 1938 the total output of Germany's machine industry is valued at five and a half billion marks (approximately $2,200,000,000). Before the war, the record annual production was 2,800,000,000 marks ($1,120,000,000). In 1938 machines exported from Germany represented a value equivalent to sixteen per cent of the total German exports for the year.

Under Major General Hanneken's supervision, German pig-iron production for the year 1938, as compared with the year 1937, increased by fourteen per cent to 18,600,000 tons. Raw steel output increased by eighteen per cent during the same period to 23,300,000 tons. By the autumn of 1939 the first blast furnace of the gigantic iron and steel works "Herman Goering" in Salzgitter, near Brunswick, will be in operation.

IDLE MEN — IDLE MONEY

Whether you are a factory worker or his wife, a trouble shooter, soda jerker, farmer or merchant, it's really worth your time to read the most important news of the past month—more important than the opening of Congress. I refer to the bank statements at the turn of the year—your own town banks. No lesson which your children bring back from school is half so important.

These statements are the barometer of business in your community, in the nation. What is business? It is jobs, payrolls, crowded stores, busy locomotives. When business is good, payrolls are good. So why not take an interest in business? Business is your business.

Here's what's wrong with business, your business:

The five largest Chicago banks show total assets or reserves of 3 billion, 141 million. One billion 287 million is in idle cash, doing nothing, earning nothing, employing nobody. That is 40 percent of the total; $40 in $100 is doing nothing for nobody nowhere. Not earning board and keep.

One billion, 76 million is in United States bonds. (This does not include State or municipal bonds). This is 34 percent. It is earning the lowest rate of return, I think, in our entire history. It is all invested in promises of Uncle Sam to be paid out of future taxes against future wealth. Some of this money has gone into roads, schools, auditoriums, skating rinks, W. P. A., theatre projects, preparations for war. However useful, scarcely a dollar is actually earning new money. The only exception would be a project like a toll bridge.

Out of this one billion 76 million of government bonds, it is doubtful if you could turn a tenth of it into cash. How much, for example, would you pay for the post office in your town?

So out of these banks' resources you have in cash and United States bonds about 74 percent that is not creating new wealth. That is $74 in a hundred. One hundred iron men, 74 idle men. Tie this fact to the unsatisfactory business in your community, to your own pay envelope.

Next we come to loans and discounts. These represent money invested in the wealth-producing activities in Chicago, in your home town. How much is it? It is 505 millions. And that, ladies and gentlemen, is 16 percent of the total. Seventy-four idle dollars, 16 busy dollars.

Another 10 percent is in bank building, Federal reserve stock, real estate, good dollars, but not hustling dollars.

In the second city of the nation it is clear that 3 bank dollars out of 4, if not 4 dollars out of 5 are idle from the standpoint of creating new wealth, like wool on a sheep's back. Idle dollars, idle men; busy dollars, busy men.

Meanwhile we are running up the national debt $6000 a minute; savings accounts are earning only 1.5 percent; our per capita production of new wealth has at no time equalled what it was in the twenties, and 10,000,000 still unemployed. We are still living on our fat.

If the thousands of pages of new laws, rules and regulations, some wholly necessary, some wholly punitive and vindictive, had brought us prosperity their wisdom or foolishness would concern us scarcely at all. But they have not done so. The proof is in the absence of the pudding.

When you reflect that there isn't a bank anywhere that wouldn't loan every dollar if it could; that there isn't a business man anywhere that wouldn't love to see his factory going top speed all the time, isn't it a tragedy that the stiff-necked pride of a few men in government, business and labor is carrying us into the tenth year of depression?

When will America say to these men, in thunder tones, "Take the brakes off honest business. Let my people go?"

AGED SADDLE MAKER

MILES CITY, Mont.,—Fred W. Kettler, 82, is still making saddles in Miles City, Mont. Since 1873, when as a lad of 16 he worked as an apprentice in the Jacob Strauss saddle shop in St. Louis, Kettler has plied his trade.

Through the hectic days of the open range when cowpokes ordered $40 saddles, though the present years of modern rodeo and motion pictures, when contestants and film stars order decorated equipment costing hundreds of dollars, Kettler has turned out saddles of all descriptions.

General Franco's problem in Spain now seems to be to find a way to stop the Italian army from helping him.

England's Mystery Man Possesses Much Power

LONDON—Introducing Sir Horace J. Wilson, England's man of mystery and the nearest approach in English post-war politics to the famed Colonel House of the Woodrow Wilson era.

He is not in the Cabinet. He is not a junior minister. He is not even a member of Parliament. He is just a civil servant bearing the somewhat prosaic title of Chief Industrial Advisor to the Government.

In reality, however, he wields tremendous power and influence. Standing always at the elbow of Premier Neville Chamberlain, the most powerful boss English politics has seen for a quarter of a century, he is in effect deputy boss of England.

His advice extends far beyond industry. It embraces foreign affairs. It takes in its stride military strategy. It covers imperial defense, armaments, general European politics, and world affairs.

Indispensable to Premier Chamberlain call him the "office boy" but others do not like the appellation. They insist it is not a true description. For Premier Chamberlain is Wilson's devoted adherent. He listens to his opinions, agrees with his decisions, uses him to carry out his plans.

The world at large first became aware of Sir Horace during the important conversations that preceded the Munich agreement. He went everywhere with Premier Chamberlain, accompanied him on his famous aerial jaunts to Germany, and even became a special messenger for the Premier when it became necessary to convey urgent letters to Hitler.

Yet Sir Horace has long been reckoned as one of the most powerful men behind the scenes in England.

Premier Stanley Baldwin liked him, and frequently consulted him on many matters other than industrial affairs. When Chamberlain succeeded him, Baldwin recommended Wilson as a man worth leaning on.

$15,000 Annual Salary

Sir Horace draws a salary of $15,000 a year. Pale complexioned, with mild blue eyes, he is clean-shaven and dark haired. He walks with a stoop, dresses unobtrusively, and altogether is the perfect illustration of the better paid English civil servant. Usually he looks his full fifty-six years.

Married, with one son and two daughters, he made his mark at the Ministry of Labor, where he was Principal Assistant Secretary from 1919 until 1921, and Permanent Secretary from 1921 until 1930, when he was created Chief Industrial Advisor to the Government.

He spends most of his time in London, and when not in Whitehall lives in quiet De Vere Gardens, in the Kensington district of the capital.

Occasionally, at week-ends, he drives down to a remote cottage he owns in the Chalford district of Sussex County. The cottage is furnished like an office, with files, desks, and telephones. As soon as he arrives there, Sir Horace begins his week-end of relaxation by sitting down and starting work again.

When he finds time, he likes to travel. It is only natural that his one club should be the Travellers, and his sole hobby work.

Out of this one billion 76 million of government bonds, it is doubtful that if you could turn a tenth of it into cash. How much, for example, would you pay for the post office in your town?

So out of these banks' resources you have in cash and United States bonds about 74 percent that is not creating new wealth. That is $74 in a hundred. One hundred iron men, 74 idle men. Tie this fact to the unsatisfactory business in your community, to your own pay envelope.

Next we come to loans and discounts. These represent money invested in the wealth-producing activities in Chicago, in your home town. How much is it? It is 505 millions. And that, ladies and gentlemen, is 16 percent of the total. Seventy-four idle dollars, 16 busy dollars.

Another 10 percent is in bank building, Federal reserve stock, real estate, good dollars, but not hustling dollars.

In the second city of the nation it is clear that 3 bank dollars out of 4, if not 4 dollars out of 5 are idle from the standpoint of creating new wealth, like wool on a sheep's back. Idle dollars, idle men; busy dollars, busy men.

Meanwhile we are running up the national debt $6000 a minute; savings accounts are earning only 1.5 percent; our per capita production of new wealth has at no time equalled what it was in the twenties, and 10,000,000 still unemployed. We are still living on our fat.

If the thousands of pages of new laws, rules and regulations, some wholly necessary, some wholly punitive and vindictive, had brought us prosperity their wisdom or foolishness would concern us scarcely at all. But they have not done so. The proof is in the absence of the pudding.

When you reflect that there isn't a bank anywhere that wouldn't loan every dollar if it could; that there isn't a business man anywhere that wouldn't love to see his factory going top speed all the time; isn't it a tragedy that the stiffnecked pride of a few men in government, business and labor is carrying us into the tenth year of depression?

When will America say to these men, in thunder tones, "Take the brakes off honest business. Let my people go?"

AGED SADDLE MAKER
MILES CITY, Mont.—Fred W. Kettler, 82, is still making saddles in Miles City, Mont. Since 1873, when as a lad of 16 he worked as an apprentice in the Jacob Strauss saddle shop in St. Louis, Kettler has plied his trade.

Through the hectic days of the open range when cowpokes ordered $40 saddles, though the present years of modern rodeo and motion pictures, when contestants and film stars order decorated equipment costing hundreds of dollars, Kettler has turned out saddles of all descriptions.

General Franco's problem in Spain now seems to be to find a way to stop the Italian army from helping him.

England's Mystery Man Possesses Much Power

LONDON—Introducing Sir Horace J. Wilson, England's man of mystery and the nearest approach in English post-war politics to the famed Colonel House of the Woodrow Wilson era.

He is not in the Cabinet. He is not a junior minister. He is not even a member of Parliament. He is just a civil servant bearing the somewhat prosaic title of Chief Industrial Advisor to the Government.

In reality, however, he wields tremendous power and influence. Standing always at the elbow of Premier Neville Chamberlain, the most powerful boss English politics has seen for a quarter of a century, he is in effect deputy boss of England.

His advice extends far beyond industry. It embraces foreign affairs. It takes in its stride military strategy. It covers imperial defense, armaments, general European politics, and world affairs.

Indispensable to Premier
His enemies call him the "office boy" but others do not like the appellation. They insist it is not a true description. For Premier Chamberlain is Wilson's, devoted adherent. He listens to his opinions, agrees with his decisions, uses him to carry out his plans.

The world at large first became aware of Sir Horace during the important conversations that preceded the Munich agreement. He went everywhere with Premier Chamberlain, accompanied him on his famous aerial jaunts to Germany, and even became a special messenger for the Premier when it became necessary to convey urgent letters to Hitler.

Yet Sir Horace has long been reckoned as one of the most powerful men behind the scenes in England. Premier Stanley Baldwin liked him, and frequently consulted him on many matters other than industrial affairs. When Chamberlain succeeded him, Baldwin recommended Wilson as a man worth leaning on.

He spends most of his time in London, and when not in Whitehall lives in quiet De Vere Gardens, in the Kensington district of the capital.

Occasionally, at week-ends, he drives down to a remote cottage he owns in the Chaleys district of Sussex County. The cottage is furnished like an office, with files, desks, and telephones. As soon as he arrives there, Sir Horace begins his week-end of relaxation by sitting down and starting work again.

When he finds time, he likes to travel. It is only natural that his one club should be the Travellers, and his sole hobby work.

PETITION SEEKS REPAIR JOB IN UPTOWN ALLEYS

72 Sign Paper Presented To Council Urging Action

UP TO SERVICE CHIEF

Poor Draining Cited For Protest; Old Brick May Be Used

A petition signed by 72 persons was filed with council Wednesday night asking improvement of alleys extending eastward from Court street between E. Main and E. Franklin streets, and the one running from E. Main to E. Franklin streets, just east of Court street.

B. F. Harden and Chester Blue appeared before council in connection with the petition. They explained the alleys were exceedingly rough and not properly drained. Storm water floods the alleys and must flow to Pickaway street to a sewer. It was suggested that a sewer be installed from the intersection of the alleys connecting to the E. Main street storm sewer in front of the Fitzpatrick printery. Councilmen referred the petition to the service committee and the service director for consideration. Some councilmen believed the old brick taken from the Court street improvement might be used to improve the alley.

Signers Listed

Signers of the petition were B. F. Harden, R. M. Leach, Bern Shidaker, Fred Boggs, Mrs. R. M. Leach, Frances Marion, Herschel Herman, and Harry Hill, Russell Miller, E. E. Wolf, M. E. Hetzler, C. E. PORTLAND, Ore.—It was a great day for the natives when seven shiny new fire trucks streaked through the city streets and screeched to a stop at a six-story structure. The only catch was that there was no smoke billowing from the building. The structure was the department's training tower and it was all a show for visiting firemen from other cities invited to inspect Portland's new fire equipment.

THE GARDEN CLINIC

By VICTOR H. RIES,
O. S. U. floriculturist

QUESTION: Our garden club is composed of 30 active members and would like to know if it is possible to obtain one of the extension representatives for a lecture. If so, whom could we obtain and would there be any cost involved?

ANSWER: The various specialists of the University agricultural extension service work only through the county agricultural agents. May I suggest that you consult your local agent and discuss this with him. Our policy is that all of our meetings shall be open to the public with everyone interested invited. There is no charge involved.

QUESTION: I have a nice rose bed but the bushes are getting too large. Some of the plants are ever-blooming varieties such as American Beauty and Radiance. I made a rack 6 feet high for them but the plants are 3 or 4 feet higher although they are not climbing roses. I would like to know how to trim my plants, how far and when it should be done.

ANSWER: Although it is rather unusual for the hybrid tea roses to grow so large here in Ohio, as long as they are growing successfully, unless you desire them lower, there is no need for your pruning them back. If, however, you wish to decrease their size, I would suggest that some time between now and Spring you cut them back about half way. In the Spring, after you have uncovered them, you can cut them to as low as 8 inches from the ground. May I suggest that you ask your county agricultural agent for a copy of our bulletin on garden roses.

QUESTION: The ground moles are burrowing in our lawn, one burrow by the side of another. Could you please tell us what we can do to exterminate them?

ANSWER: There is no easy method of exterminating moles. Many people are successful with traps but this means that you must keep setting the traps every day or two until you are sure you have them set in one of the main runs. The spike type of trap seems to be preferable to the claw type. The trap should be tested several times before it is finally set to make sure it is working properly.

Some people seem to be successful with cyanogas, putting in a teaspoonful or so every few feet of burrow. Still others seem to get results putting the hose on the exhaust of their autos and forcing exhaust fumes into the tunnels. Whatever method is used must be followed up conscientiously.

ANSWER: May I suggest that you secure a copy of "How to Arrange Flowers" by Dorothy Bidle. If this does not give you sufficient information, then secure a copy of the book "Flower Arrangements" by Rockwell and Grayson. If these books do not give you sufficient information, I will be very glad to send you a complete list of the books published on the subject of flower arrangement as well as other garden subjects.

QUESTION: I have a considerable number of leaves in my yard and would like to know whether I can use them to make artificial manure.

ANSWER: Artificial manure is very satisfactory provided you have ample water. Since the process of decomposition occurs when the chemicals are applied to the leaves, it requires large amounts of water to allow them to act. May I suggest that you write the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, Wooster, Ohio, and ask for bulletin 525 on Flower Growing. On the first page of this bulletin you will find complete instructions for making artificial manure.

QUESTION: Some friends just brought me some rhododendrons from West Virginia. Can you tell me how I should take care of these?

ANSWER: This is an extremely difficult time to handle any broadleaf evergreen such as rhododendrons. I would say that the only chance that you have of saving them would be to build a fence around the plants and fill it in with leaves to reduce the evaporation and drying of the leaves and stems as much as possible. We find in Ohio that rhododendrons do best if planted in partial shade, more or less protected from prevailing winds. They also require an acid soil. Since the only way to tell whether your soil is acid or not is by a soil test, I suggest that you take a sample of soil to your county agricultural agent. From this test, he will be able to tell you whether your soil needs additional acidification and how to do it. The materials used for acidifying the soil are aluminum sulphate and sulphur.

PETITION SEEKS REPAIR JOB IN UPTOWN ALLEYS

72 Sign Paper Presented To Council Urging Action

UP TO SERVICE CHIEF

Poor Draining Cited For Protest; Old Brick May Be Used

A petition signed by 72 persons was filed with council Wednesday night asking improvement of alleys extending eastward from Court street between E. Main and E. Franklin streets, and the one running from E. Main to E. Franklin streets, just east of Court street.

B. F. Harden and Chester Blue appeared before council in connection with the petition. They explained the alleys were exceedingly rough and not properly drained. Storm water floods the alleys and must flow to Pickaway street to a sewer. It was suggested that a sewer be installed from the intersection of the alleys connecting to the E. Main street sewer in front of the Fitzpatrick printery. Councilmen referred the petition to the service committee and the service director for consideration. Some councilmen believed the old brick taken from the Court street improvement might be used to improve the alley.

FIRE TRUCK DISPLAY

PORTLAND, Ore.—It was a great day for the natives when seven shiny new fire trucks streaked through the city streets and screeched to a stop at a six-story structure.

The only catch was that there was no smoke billowing from the building. The structure was the department's training tower and it was all a show for visiting fire-men from other cities invited to inspect Portland's new fire equip-ment.

THE GARDEN CLINIC

By VICTOR H. RIES,
O. S. U. floriculturist

QUESTION: Our garden club is composed of 30 active members and would like to know if it is possible to obtain one of the extension representatives for a lecture. If so, whom could we obtain and would there be any cost involved?

ANSWER: The various specialists of the University agricultural extension service work only through the county agricultural agents. May I suggest that you consult your local agent and discuss this with him. Our policy is that all of our meetings shall be open to the public with everyone interested invited. There is no charge involved.

QUESTION: I have a nice rose bed but the bushes are getting too large. Some of the plants are ever-blooming varieties such as American Beauty and Radiance. I made a rack 6 feet high for them but the plants are 3 or 4 feet higher although they are not climbing roses. I would like to know how to trim my plants, how far and when it should be done.

ANSWER: Although it is rather unusual for the hybrid tea roses to grow so large here in Ohio, as long as they are growing successfully, unless you desire them lower, there is no need for your pruning them back. If, however, you wish to decrease their size, I would suggest that some time between now and Spring you cut them back about half way. In the Spring, after you have uncovered them, you can cut them to as low as 8 inches from the ground. May I suggest that you ask your county agricultural agent for a copy of our bulletin on garden roses.

QUESTION: The ground moles are burrowing in our lawn, one burrow by the side of another. Could you please tell us what we can do to exterminate them?

ANSWER: There is no easy method of exterminating moles. Many people are successful with traps but this means that you must keep setting the traps every day or two until you are sure you have them set in one of the main runs. The spike type of trap seems to be preferable to the claw type. The trap should be tested several times before it is finally set to make sure it is working properly.

Some people seem to be successful with cyanogas, putting in a teaspoonful or so every few feet of burrow. Still others seem to get results putting the hose on the exhaust of their autos and forcing exhaust fumes into the tunnels. Whatever method is used must be followed up conscientiously.

ANSWER: May I suggest that you secure a copy of "How to Arrange Flowers" by Dorothy Bid-die. If this does not give you sufficient information, then secure a copy of the book "Flower Arrangements" by Rockwell and Grayson. If these books do not give you sufficient information, I will be very glad to send you a complete list of the books published on the subject of flower arrangement as well as other garden subjects.

QUESTION: I have a considerable number of leaves in my yard and would like to know whether I can use them to make artificial manure.

ANSWER: Artificial manure is very satisfactory provided you have ample water. Since the process of decomposition occurs when the chemicals are applied to the leaves, it requires large amounts of water to allow them to act. May I suggest that you write the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, Wooster, Ohio, and ask for bulletin 525 on Flower Grow-ing. On the first page of this bulletin you will find complete instructions for making artificial manure.

QUESTION: Some friends just brought me some rhododendrons from West Virginia. Can you tell me how I should take care of these?

ANSWER: This is an extremely difficult time to handle any broadleaf evergreen such as rhododendrons. I would say that the only chance that you have of saving them would be to build a fence around the plants and fill it in with leaves to reduce the evaporation and drying of the leaves and stems as much as possible. We find in Ohio that rhododendrons do best if planted in partial shade, more or less protected from prevailing winds. They also require an acid soil. Since the only way to tell whether your soil is acid or not is by a soil test, I suggest that you take a sample of soil to your county agricultural agent. From this test, he will be able to tell you whether your soil needs additional acidification and how to do it. The materials used for acidifying the soil are aluminum sulphate and sulphur.

QUESTION: I have been appointed executive chairman of our flower show and would like any information you have so that I may improve it over last years show.

ANSWER: I am sending you our leaflet on planning and staging flower shows which we are glad to send to anyone who is interested in shows.

QUESTION: I have to prepare a talk on flower arrangement for our farm garden club and would like to have some references for reading on this subject.

ANSWER: May I suggest that you secure a copy of "How to Arrange Flowers" by Dorothy Bid-die. If this does not give you sufficient information, then secure a copy of the book "Flower Arrangements" by Rockwell and Grayson. If these books do not give you sufficient information, I will be very glad to send you a complete list of the books published on the subject of flower arrangement as well as other garden subjects.

THOUSANDS FOR TWELVE JOBS

WHEN it was announced that New York City had jobs open for twelve laboratory helpers, 4,139 women came to apply for them. Some waited for thirty hours prior to the opening of the doors.

The first application was filled out by a widow with two sons in high school. She had been waiting since 4 a. m. of the day before. Some slept on the floor during their night vigil. Others gathered in little groups to chat or sing or play word games. The jobs pay less than $1,000 a year, and 4,127 of the women were bound to be disappointed, but there they all were.

The Municipal Civil Service commission hopes it can place some in other departments at some sort of work. The Commissioner, it was reported, "seemed deeply affected as he looked at the sea of expectant faces."

This great turn-out for a dozen jobs may have been as large as it was because of the permanence and security that supposedly go with civil service. Yet there have been similar throngs of eager people seeking work on other occasions. All that is necessary to draw a crowd is to advertise that help is wanted.

There may be a lot of lazy chiselers in this country, but there is plenty of evidence to prove that there are even more persons who prefer work to loafing and self-support to relief.

GOOD WILL AND BUSINESS

OSWALDO ARANHA, Brazilian Minister of Foreign Affairs now in this country to confer with President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, smiles at the fears expressed in some places that anyone is trying to put anything over on anyone else. He believes hate and suspicion between nations achieve nothing. Frank talks "between friends" are better.

"I was invited to come to this country," he told interviewers. "And when you are invited to a man's house you do not know of the food you are going to eat or how long you may remain. Naturally, we will talk about our common interests, and we will say what we think. We are going to adjust the clocks — set our timepieces together."

"We will have no reserve on any matter. We are conscious of our responsibilities and our position, and I am convinced that these talks will be a new demonstration of our similar convictions and ideals."

"What Brazil needs is the cooperation of an industrial country with technique and capital, and we naturally would like to discuss or, better, to explain our needs."

It all sounds sensible and fair. If the visit proves a happy one and the talks are

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

LATE POPE WANTED ENVOY HERE

WASHINGTON — It will probably be denied officially, but some months before the Pope's death, the question of sending a U. S. envoy to the Vatican was under consideration.

Behind the discussion was the fact that Pope Pius was one of the outstanding opponents of European dictatorship, and cherished ideals not unlike Roosevelt's.

The United States formerly exchanged envoys with the Vatican, but relations were discontinued in 1867, and since that time the American Cardinals themselves have been the chief obstacle in the path of resuming diplomatic relations. Under the present system the Cardinals report direct to Rome, and have greater freedom than the Cardinals in any other country. With a Papal Nuncio in Washington, they would have to report direct to him, thus curtailing much of their independence.

However, the late Pope Pius, worried over religious persecution in Germany, saw the United States as a friendly ally in combating Nazism. Seldom before has the Vatican given such support to the policies of an American President as the late Pope gave to Roosevelt. When Italian newspapers attacked American policy at the Lima Conference, the Vatican newspaper championed it. Vatican authorities also silenced Father Coughlin for a time when he was especially virulent against Roosevelt.

Had Pope Pius lived longer it is believed that diplomatic relations might have been resumed with the Vatican. Future developments will depend upon the policy to be followed by his successor.

MISS PERKINS' IMPEACHMENT

After Congressman Thomas, New Jersey Republican who is impeaching Miss Perkins, had given the Judiciary Committee all his "evidence" against her, one of the Democratic members turned to Chairman Hatton Summers, hard-bitten Texan, and asked: "Well, Mr. Chairman, what do you think of it?"

Summers in his customary drawl, replied: "It reminds me of the story about the Negro who was brought before the court on a murder charge."

"Sam," the judge asked, "where's your lawyer?"

"Ain't got none," the prisoner replied.

"Where are your witnesses?"

"Ain't got none."

"No lawyer and no witnesses?" the judge asked. "Don't you know this is a mighty serious charge against you, Sam? Just what are you going to do about it?"

"Well, your honor," Sam finally replied, "I thought I'd let the whole matter drop."

Red-faced, Congressman Thomas stalked out of the committee room.

followed by constructive action, perhaps there will be a procession of such visitors to Washington. The Lima Conference, while accomplishing a good deal, showed that the neighbors needed to get better acquainted with each other.

There may be danger of inflation, but so far most of us have been suffering from contraction.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to find Winter playing a return engagement. Hope, really, that it is a farewell tour. Found the house chilly, so did stir the furnace then over the morning coffee read the early day print, discovering more and more disturbing news out of Europe and Asia. The scrivener for one is thoroughly in accord with a program for expansion of armament, but believes that the recommendations should have been made by trained men of the army and navy rather than by politicians who hardly know the difference between a transport plane and a pursuit plane or the difference between a machine gun and a 16 inch rifle.

Out and over the paves, noting that Dr. O. J. Towers has joined W. Sens. abrenner in wearing ear muffs. Wonder where they get those black ones. Was at Bob and Ed's the other day when a farmer came in for a black pair, but all that could be offered him were those brilliant hues so affected now by the high school kids. Saw the farmer later and he said he was unable to find black ones in town. "I'll freeze both ears right off before I'll wear those rah-rah ones," he declared.

Met William J. Green, who farms a thousand acres up Orient way, he being in to renew his subscription and asking whether we would cash a small check for him. We would until we saw the size of it, a full $790 from the government for not growing something or other. Will was quite pleased over the bit of paper, and declared that had he not been able to believe that he should sign up for patriotic reasons that he would feel quite sheepish about accepting the money.

It was about 20 years ago that Will was married. Then, he had less than $100. Today he owns 100 acres, rents 900 acres more, operates two rubber-tired combines, a corn picker, big farm truck and much other equipment, all of which is really his. And he and his fine wife have raised five children. One of his boys is now in Florida on a vacation. "Times have changed very much," says Will. "Why, I was eighteen years old before I ever got as far away from the farm as Circleville."

John Keller, the county commissioner, dropped in to ask whether I knew that a movement is on foot in Columbus to kill off the law requiring publication of the delinquent tax list. Asked John about the effect of the last local publication and he said that the advertisement had paid the county great dividends. Many persons able to pay, but who had not paid because little or no penalty was attached, rushed to the courthouse to square their accounts and escape publication of their names. That, really, is the purpose of the publication, to force those who can pay to do so. The man unable to pay just can not pay and all his friends know the facts, so nothing is held against them.

Let's let this one pass—It's the milk train!

DIET AND HEALTH

Rest and Exercise in Heart Ailments

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WHEN ONE has been told that he has heart disease—either high blood pressure with consequent heart complications, or an attack of heart pang (angina)—or when a heart murmur meaning valvular disease is discovered in a young person, the decision has to be made as to how to balance, in the future, rest and exercise.

In any discussion of the subject, you hear over and over again the statement made in the most authoritative tones, "The one absolutely essen accident. It is good for him and prolongs life.

Two Classes

The two classes of patients in which exercise must be carefully supervised are those who, after an attack of angina or coronary thrombosis, have had a period of rest and now need to be rehabilitated, and, second, those with high blood pressure and some of its complications.

In the first group, graduated exercise can be begun in bed first with massage, passive movements and respiratory exercises, and following that the resistant exercises of the brothers Schott. The graded method of exercise consists of gradual walks carried out to the point where any symptoms such as breathlessness occur. Beginning on a horizontal level the walks are increased gradually with regard to distance and incline.

For ambulatory patients with high blood pressure, it is difficult to gauge the amount of exercise for which the heart muscle has capacity. Games with intermittent action are obviously preferable—such as croquet, lawn bowls and archery. Golf often falls under the head of intermittent but sometimes of continuous exercise.

Must Be Balanced

It sounds contradictory, but, as a matter of fact, it is not necessarily so, because the two things must be balanced. The publicity given the sudden death of some prominent citizen while carrying out any particular effort, such as golf, horseback riding or public speaking, accentuates the belief in the harm of exercise in heart disease. But as my friend, Dr. Louis F. Bishop, Jr., of New York, points out, there is no special emphasis put on the occurrence when a man with heart disease dies in bed, where most of them do.

It is well recognized that the aged ill should not be kept in bed, but it has not been sufficiently appreciated that the middle-aged with impaired circulation can also be harmed by too prolonged bed rest.

Two groups of patients with heart disease need especially-planned exercise. It is manifestly impossible to limit very much the young person who has been found to have a heart murmur following an attack of inflammatory rheumatism. A boy of 12 is going to play baseball, and when he hits the ball he is going to run to first base as hard as he can, and forget—God bless him!—all about his murmur. And that is what he should do. Exercise is just as good for the heart muscle as for any other muscle in the body. Exercise in such a patient never causes sud-

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. R. E.: "For the past several days I have had a sweet taste in my mouth and I have not eaten any thing sweet for three months. What have you to say about this?"

Answer: It is probably due to fermentation. The salivary juice is capable of turning ordinary starch into sugar, and perhaps some bread or cracker particles are fermenting.

J. S.: "Please tell me what foods contain Vitamin A."

Answer: Artichokes, bananas, string beans, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, butter, cantaloups, carrots, American cheese, cream cheese, dates, eggs, kidney, romaine lettuce, liver, whole milk, dried green peas, peppers, sweet potatoes, prunes, raw and canned spinach, raw and canned tomatoes.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendenning can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendenning, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Resting Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Heart Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

CONTRACT BRIDGE

READ THE ROAD SIGNS

ANY EFFICIENT automobile driver reads the road signs, in order to keep out of trouble. It is the same in selecting the opening lead against the opponents' contract. Sometimes the lead which is indicated as the best will not defeat the contract, whereas the apparently worst possible lead will. But in the long run it will pay to observe the logic of the situation as pointed by the bidding and by the cards you hold yourself.

When South bid 3-No trump, North asked about aces with the Blackwood 4-No trump and South showed one with 5-Diamonds. North next asked about kings with 5-No trump and South showed none with 6-Clubs.

North thereupon put South into 6-No trump.

Sound logic for West would be about as follows: My own hand is worthless, so I should lead what figures to be the best help to my partner in setting this contract. The opponents' suits of diamonds and clubs are out of the question. My own spades are hopeless. I must lead a heart.

Had West done that the contract would have been set. For East would have taken one trick in hearts and one in clubs. But West didn't. He led the fourth-best of his own suit, spades. The declarer won it in dummy, led a club, and so lost only one trick, to the club K, as the diamond suit set up on a lucky break.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Asked to leave her boarding house because she had no money to pay rent, Lona Ackerman finds herself stranded on a city street. That night the man who had taken Lona's room finds her on a park bench. He offers to treat her to something to eat.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER THREE

THE RESTAURANT seemed unbelievably warm and cozy to Lona after her lonely vigil on the park bench. By the time she had finished her second cup of coffee—blessed coffee!—she found herself pouring out to this utter stranger who had befriended her things she hadn't mentioned to a soul since she came to the city almost seven years ago.

Something about him seemed to invite confidence. Perhaps it was the stimulus of the meal he had just bought her—her first real meal in two days! Or perhaps it was the fact that his brown eyes kept reminding her of Tiny, the spaniel, and of her old life.

Funny to keep comparing this good-looking young man to a dog, but she couldn't help it. There was in his eyes the same sympathy, the same yearning she had often seen in Tiny's. And, after all, Tiny had loved her, and she had loved him. Talking to this stranger was, somehow, like talking to Tiny. He seemed to understand without asking any questions. She even found herself telling him about—her father.

"It was daddy who named me Lona," she laughed a little ruefully. "I've often thought in the last years that he must have known, even then, how it would fit."

"It's a pretty name," he said, gravely. "And it does fit you, somehow. You seem such a—lonely little girl."

"It's not only now," she went on. "It was that way back home after my mother died, and father—who you see, my father's—not dead. He didn't leave me that way. He—they sent him away."

Somehow the words seemed to be wrung from her. The sympathy in the brown eyes seemed to be drawing them out. "He—my father killed a man."

The eyes narrowed at that, and she saw the hand that was taking a cigarette from his pocket pause, and grip itself into a hard, white fist. A sense of disappointment filled her. Was he going to be like all the rest? It came to her, then, just why she had felt impelled to tell him all about it. She had been hoping . . .

"They sent him to the penitentiary—for life," she brought out slowly.

"The poor devil," he looked away from her and she saw that his hands trembled. A drawn look came into his lean face and for a second he seemed years older than she had thought.

"It was my fault," she went on, when he did not speak again. "The man—insulted me, and I told my father. I never thought he'd kill him. He was so gentle, father was. I've always blamed myself—"

"Don't, girl!" The brown eyes were oddly pleading. "I don't like to hear you talking about such things. A—kid like you! I had a friend once who—died in the pen," he explained. "I—know a few things."

Lona's heart warmed to him anew. Usually when people found out about her they looked at her in a sort of curious horror. But in spite of his first hesitation, he seemed to have only sympathy.

Across the white-topped restaurant table she studied his lean face. It was browned and sun burned as if he worked in the wind and sun. He was good looking in a rugged sort of way. His features, taken separately, were not handsome; a big nose, a curving, sensitive mouth, and a jaw that would have been square but for its almost painful leanness. But taken as a whole, with the wistful brown eyes to set

"Oh, no!" she cried out. "You mustn't."

it off, it was an attractive face. "Well, what's the verdict?" he asked with a whimsical little half smile when she had studied him for a long moment.

"I was just thinking that I had told you all about myself, and I don't even know your name."

"Claridge, Jim Claridge's my name," he bowed, and snipped the ashes from his cigarette into the heavy white ash tray. "I'm twenty-nine years old. Be thirty my next birthday. I've only been in this man's town three days, and I'll probably leave it again within three months. I'm a structural iron worker. My firm has the job on the new terminal building down by the square."

"I was born on a ranch in California, and was raised out west. I've worked, so far, in twenty-six different cities in these United States. Will probably see twenty-six more before I'm through. I haven't any relatives, and nobody to support but myself. And so I make a hobby of picking up girls from park benches and seeing that they're taken care of until they can find work." He hunted in his pocket as he spoke, and pulling out a bill, put it into Lona's hand as it lay on the table.

For a moment she stared at it. Then she looked up at him. "Oh, no!" she cried out. "You mustn't! I can't take this. Why, I never saw you until tonight. I can't take—money, from you."

"What are you going to do?" He shrugged. "You can't go back to the park. There's a decent looking hotel a couple of blocks down the street. I'll see that you get a room for the night. Tomorrow you can start hunting a new boarding house, unless you'd rather I went to the hotel, and you to your old room at Mrs. Peterman's."

"I couldn't go back there!" Lona shuddered. "I never want to see that woman again!"

"I thought you'd feel that way. It's the hotel, then." He picked up her suitcase matter-of-factly, and before she quite knew what was happening, Lona found herself out in the street, his hand on her arm, the bill he had given her still clutched in her hand.

A protest rose to her lips again as he led her into the hotel lobby and up to the desk. "I shouldn't let you," she said weakly. "It's not right. I shouldn't let you do it!" But when he pushed the pen into her hand, she found herself signing the register, conscious of the curious eyes of the clerk going from one to the other. A little lump came to her throat and she swallowed. It was so nice to be cared for! Nobody had done anything for her since her father—went away. It was so good just to shut her eyes and let things happen!

"I'll pay you back," she told him, huskily. "As soon as I get a job. I never thought anybody could be so good."

"Listen, girl," he looked down at her, and in the brown eyes there was a tenderness that almost shamed her. "I lied when I said I didn't have any folks," he said, oddly. "I have. I've got a sister. She's just about your age. And I think she must look something like you do. I haven't seen her for years, but you make me think of her. I'd hate to have her wandering in the park without any money. Do you see?"

"I—see. And I'll pay you back. I'll get a job soon, tomorrow maybe. I have to get a job soon!" She seemed to be trying to convince herself as well as him.

"Of course you'd get a job," he assured her. "A girl like you can always find a job."

"I'd scrub floors, anything—anything," she burst out. "There just doesn't seem to be anything."

"I'll keep my eyes open," he told her. "If I hear of anything I'll call her. And what do you say you meet me tomorrow night and report progress? I'd sort of like company for dinner." He grinned suddenly, and held out his hand.

Solemnly Lona took it. And in spite of her efforts to control them, the quick tears came again at his touch.

"What's the matter, girl?" he asked. "Is it that you don't trust me? Don't you think I'm on the level? If you're afraid of me, I'll clear out, and you won't ever have to see me again. Is that what you want?"

"Oh, no. No!" Lona's voice rose sharply. "It's not that. I'll meet you tomorrow night or any other time you want to see me. It's just that you're so good. I didn't think there was anyone like you left in the world, anywhere!"

THOUSANDS FOR TWELVE JOBS

WHEN it was announced that New York City had jobs open for twelve laboratory helpers, 4,139 women came to apply for them. Some waited for thirty hours prior to the opening of the doors.

The first application was filled out by a widow with two sons in high school.
She had been waiting since 4 a. m. of the day before. Some slept on the floor during their night vigil. Others gathered in little groups to chat or sing or play word games. The jobs pay less than $1,000 a year, and 4,127 of the women were bound to be disappointed, but there they all were.

The Municipal Civil Service commission hopes it can place some in other departments at some sort of work. The Commissioner, it was reported, "seemed deeply affected as he looked at the sea of expectant faces."

This great turn-out for a dozen jobs may have been as large as it was because of the permanence and security that supposedly go with civil service. Yet there have been similar throngs of eager people seeking work on other occasions. All that is necessary to draw a crowd is to advertise that help is wanted.

There may be a lot of lazy chiselers in this country, but there is plenty of evidence to prove that there are even more persons who prefer work to loafing and self-support to relief.

GOOD WILL AND BUSINESS

OSWALDO ARANHA, Brazilian Minister of Foreign Affairs now in this country to confer with President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, smiles at the fears expressed in some places that anyone is trying to put anything over on anyone else.
He believes hate and suspicion between nations achieve nothing. Frank talks "between friends" are better.

"I was invited to come to this country," he told interviewers. "And when you are invited to a man's house you do not know of the food you are going to eat or how long you may remain. Naturally, we will talk about our common interests, and we will say what we think. We are going to adjust the clocks — set our timepieces together.

"We will have no reserve on any matter. We are conscious of our responsibilities and our position, and I am convinced that these talks will be a new demonstration of our similar convictions and ideals.

"What Brazil needs is the cooperation of an industrial country with technique and capital, and we naturally would like to discuss or, better, to explain our needs."

It all sounds sensible and fair. If the visit proves a happy one and the talks are

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN.

LATE POPE WANTED ENVOY HERE

WASHINGTON — It will probably be denied officially, but some months before the Pope's death, the question of sending a U. S. envoy to the Vatican was under consideration.

Behind the discussion was the fact that Pope Pius was one of the outstanding opponents of European dictatorship, and cherished ideals not unlike Roosevelt's.

The United States formerly exchanged envoys with the Vatican, but relations were discontinued in 1867, and since that time the American Cardinals themselves have been the chief obstacle in the path of resuming diplomatic relations. Under the present system the Cardinals report direct to Rome, and have greater freedom than the Cardinals in any other country.
With a Papal Nuncio in Washington, they would have to report direct to him, thus curtailing much of their independence.

However, the late Pope Pius, worried over religious persecution in Germany, saw the United States as a friendly ally in combating Nazism. Seldom before has the Vatican given such support to the policies of an American President as the late Pope gave to Roosevelt. When Italian newspapers attacked American policy at the Lima Conference, the Vatican newspaper championed it. Vatican authorities also silenced Father Coughlin for a time when he was especially virulent against Roosevelt.

Had Pope Pius lived longer it is believed that diplomatic relations might have been resumed with the Vatican. Future developments will depend upon the policy to be followed by his successor.

MISS PERKINS' IMPEACHMENT

After Congressman Thomas, New Jersey Republican who is impeaching Miss Perkins, had given the Judiciary Committee all his "evidence" against her, one of the Democratic members turned to Chairman Hutton Summers, hard-bitten Texan, and asked: "Well, Mr. Chairman, what do you think of it?"

Summers in his customary drawl, replied: "It reminds me of the story about the Negro who was brought before the court on a murder charge.

"Sam, the judge asked, 'where's your lawyer?"

"Ain't got none," the prisoner replied.

"Where are your witnesses?"

"Ain't got none."

"No lawyer and no witnesses?" the judge asked. "Don't you know this is a mighty serious charge against you, Sam?

Just what are you going to do about it?"

"Well, your honor, Sam finally replied, 'I thought I'd let the whole matter drop!'"

Red-faced, Congressman Thomas stalked out of the committee room.

followed by constructive action, perhaps there will be a procession of such visitors to Washington. The Lima Conference, while accomplishing a good deal, showed that the neighbors needed to get better acquainted with each other.

There may be danger of inflation, but so far most of us have been suffering from contraction.

DIET AND HEALTH

Rest and Exercise in Heart Ailments

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WHEN ONE has been told that he has heart disease—either high blood pressure with consequent heart complications, or an attack of heart pang (angina)—or when a heart murmur meaning valvular disease is discovered in a young person, the decision has to be made as to how to balance, in the future, rest and exercise.

In any discussion of the subject, you hear over and over again the statement made in the most authoritative tones, "The one absolutely es-den accident. It is good for him and prolongs life.

Two Classes

The two classes of patients in which exercise must be carefully supervised are those who, after an attack of angina or coronary thrombosis, have had a period of rest and now need to be rehabilitated, and second, those with high blood pressure and some of its complications.

In the first group, graduated exercise can be begun in bed first with massage, passive movements and respiratory exercises, and following that the resistant exercises of the brothers Schott. The Oertel method of exercise consists of graded walks carried out to the point where any symptoms such as breathlessness occur. Beginning on a horizontal level, the walks are increased gradually with regard to distance and incline.

For ambulatory patients with high blood pressure, it is difficult to gauge the amount of exercise for which the heart muscle has capacity.
Games with intermittent action are obviously preferable—such as croquet, lawn bowls and archery. Golf often falls under the head of intermittent but sometimes of continuous exercise.

Must Be Balanced

It sounds contradictory, but, as a matter of fact, it is not necessarily so, because the two things must be balanced. The publicity given the sudden death of some prominent citizen while carrying out any particular effort, such as golf, horseback riding or public speaking, accentuates the belief in the harm of exercise in heart disease. But as my friend, Dr. Louis F. Bishop, Jr., of New York, points out, there is no special emphasis put on the occurrence when a man with heart disease dies in bed, where most of them do.

It is well recognized that the aged ill should not be kept in bed, but it has not been sufficiently appreciated that the middle-aged with impaired circulation can also be harmed by too prolonged bed rest.

Two groups of patients with heart disease need especially-planned exercise. It is manifestly impossible to limit very much the young person who has been found to have a heart murmur following an attack of inflammatory rheumatism. A boy of 12 is going to play baseball, and when he hits the ball he is going to run to first base as hard as he can, and forget—God bless him!—all about his murmur. And that is what he should do. Exercise is just as good for the heart muscle as for any other muscle in the body. Exercise in such a patient never causes sudden accident. It is good for him and prolongs life.

"They sent him to the penitentiary—for life," she brought out slowly.

"The poor devil." He looked away from her and saw that his hands trembled. A draw look came into his face and for a bill, put it into Lona's hand as it lay on
the table.

For a moment she stared at it.
Then she looked up at him. "Oh,
no!" she cried out. "You mustn't!"

"I can't take this. Why, I never saw you until tonight. I can't take—money, from you."

"What are you going to do?" He shuffled. "You can't go back to the park. There's a decent looking hotel a couple of blocks down the street. I'll see that you get a room for the night. Tomorrow you can start hunting a new boarding house, unless you'd rather I went to the hotel, and you to your old
room at Mrs. Peterman's."

"I couldn't go back there!" Lona shuddered. "I never want to see
the woman again!"

"I thought you'd feel that way.
It's the hotel, then." He picked up her suitcase matter-of-factly, and before she quite knew what was happening, Lona found herself out
in the street, his hand on her arm,
the bill he had given her still clutched in her hand.

A protest rose to her lips again
as he led her into the hotel lobby and up to the desk. "I shouldn't let you," she said weakly. "It's not

READ THE ROAD SIGNS

ANY EFFICIENT automobile driver reads the road signs, in order to keep out of trouble. It is the same in selecting the opening lead against the opponents' contract. Sometimes the lead which is indicated as the best will not depend on the contract, whereas the apparently worst possible lead will.
But in the long run it will pay to observe the logic of the situation as pointed by the bidding and by the cards you hold yourself.

least, it was a force unless South's hand barely held enough for his first bid. When South bid 3-No trump, North asked about aces with the Blackwood 4-No trump and South showed one with 5-Diamonds. North next asked about kings with 6-No trump and South showed none with 6-Clubs.

John Keller, the county commissioner, dropped in to ask whether I knew that a movement is on foot in Columbus to kill off the law requiring publication of the delinquent tax list. Asked John about the effect of the last local publication and he said that the advertisement had paid the county great dividends. Many persons able to pay, but who had not paid because little or no penalty was attached, rushed to the courthouse to square their accounts and escape publication of their names. That, really, is the purpose of the publication, to force those who can pay to do so.
The man unable to pay just can not pay and all his friends know the facts, so nothing is held against them.

North thereupon put South into 6-No trump.

Sound logic for West would be about as follows: My own hand is worthless, so I should lead what figures to be the best help to my partner in setting this contract.
The opponents' suits of diamonds and clubs are out of the question.
My own spades are hopeless. I must lead a heart.

Had West done that the contract would have been set. For East would have taken one trick in hearts and one in clubs. But West didn't. He led the fourth-best of his own suit, spades. The declarer won it in dummy, led a club, and so lost only one trick, to the club K, as the diamond suit set up on a lucky break.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED
BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:
Asked to leave her boarding house because she had no money to pay rent, Lona Ackerman finds herself stranded on a city street. That night the man who had taken Lona's room finds her on a park bench. He offers to treat her to something to eat.
(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER THREE

THE RESTAURANT seemed unbelievably warm and cozy to Lona after her lonely vigil on the park bench. By the time she had finished her second cup of coffee—blessed coffee!—she found herself pouring out to this utter stranger who had befriended her things she hadn't mentioned to a soul since she came to the city almost seven years ago.

Something about him seemed to invite confidence. Perhaps it was the stimulus of the meal he had just bought her—her first real meal in two days! Or perhaps it was the fact that his brown eyes kept reminding her of Tiny, the spaniel, and of her old life.

Funny to keep comparing this good-looking young man to a dog, but she couldn't help it. There was in his eyes the same sympathy, the same yearning she had often seen in Tiny's. And, after all, Tiny had loved her, and she had loved him.
Talking to this stranger was somehow, like talking to Tiny. He seemed to understand without asking any questions. She even found herself telling him about—her father.

"It was daddy who named me Lona." She laughed a little ruefully.
"I've often thought in the last years that I must have known, even then, how it would be."

"It's a pretty name," he said, gravely. "And it does fit you, somehow. You seem such a—lonely little girl."

"It's not only now," she went on.
"It was that way back home after my mother died, and father—you see, my father's—not dead. He didn't leave me that way. He—they sent him away."

Somehow the words seemed to be wrong from her. The sympathy in the brown eyes seemed to be drawing them out. "He—my father killed a man."

The eyes narrowed at that, and she saw the hand that was taking a cigarette from his pocket pause, and grip itself into a hard, white fist. A sense of disappointment filled her. Was he going to be like all the rest? It came to her, then, just why she had felt impelled to tell him all about it. She had been hoping . . .

"They sent him to the penitentiary—for life," she brought out
slowly.

"The poor devil." He looked away from her and saw that his hands trembled. A draw look
came into his face and for a bill,
put it into Lona's hand as it lay on
the table.

For a moment she stared at it.
Then she looked up at him. "Oh,
no!" she cried out. "You mustn't!"

"I can't take this. Why, I never saw you until tonight. I can't take—
money, from you."

"What are you going to do?" He shuffled. "You can't go back to the park. There's a decent looking hotel a couple of blocks down the street. I'll see that you get a room for the night. Tomorrow you can start hunting a new boarding house, unless you'd rather I went to the hotel, and you to your old
room at Mrs. Peterman's."

"I couldn't go back there!" Lona shuddered. "I never want to see
the woman again!"

"I thought you'd feel that way.
It's the hotel, then." He picked up
her suitcase matter-of-factly, and
before she quite knew what was happening, Lona found herself out
in the street, his hand on her arm,
the bill he had given her still
clutched in her hand.

A protest rose to her lips again
as he led her into the hotel lobby
and up to the desk. "I shouldn't let

Most emphasis was placed on the separate Rights, the freedom of religion, of speech, of press, of assembly and petition, all of which are indispensable requisites of every free government. With the U. S. the most outstanding democracy of the world today, the legion auxiliary sees the real need of being alert and well informed as to our Civil Liberties. Most emphasis was placed on the separate Rights, the freedom of religion, of speech, of press, of assembly and petition, all of which are indispensable requisites of every free government. Breast and hip yokes are treated with rows of stitching as are the revers, the borders and the collar. A vertical row of stitching is used down the center of the skirt which is straight in cut. NEW YORK, Feb. 16—A freak rain and snow laden gale that lashed the eastern half of the country spent its force early today leaving death and destruction in its path.

Fears of a repetition of last September's hurricanes and tidal wave which brought a loss of 700 lives subsided as a change in wind direction brought an end to the storm.

Man Blown From Roof

Two deaths directly attributable to the storm occurred in New Jersey. Laszlo David, 54, was blown off the roof of his home at New Brunswick, N. J., while attempting repairs in the storm. Joseph Botts, 50, a fisherman, was drowned when his boat capsized in the Delaware river at Bordentown, N. J.

In upstate New York, two brothers, William and Thomas Holleran, were swept to their deaths in the Chemung river when breaking ice washed away a cat-walk on a P.W.A. bridge project. A half-dozen others were fished from the icy waters.

One man was killed in Alabama when the wind demolished his house.

Pennsylvania reported two deaths attributable to the storm. In New York city a record high temperature of 62 degrees for the date was recorded.

Buffalo and Rochester, N. Y., were blanketed by a three-inch snow fall.

A "twister" swept through the little town of Bath, Pa., demolished a theatre and a barn and unroofed a number of houses. Telephone and power lines were blown down. The sudden rush of rain waters trapped three W.P.A. workers in a Brooklyn flood sewer but all were rescued none the worse for their experience by heroic Fred Smith, a fireman, who swam 200 feet in the raging underground current.

Gales also lashed Alabama and the Carolinas inflicting considerable damage.

33 WOMEN MAY REGAIN PLACES ON W. P. A. ROLL

Thirty-three Circleville and Pickaway county women who were removed recently from W. P. A. when it was contended they were eligible for relief funds under aid to dependent children will be re-certified for W. P. A. positions, D. H. Marcy, county relief director, said Thursday.

In the list of those discharged only two were found eligible for A. D. C. aid, Marcy said. Most of the others have been receiving aid from the county since they have been unemployed.

Miss Virginia Smith, administrator of A. D. C. aid in the county, received a letter Thursday from Henry J. Robinson, chief of the division of public assistance, stating that until more funds are available all women with dependent children who are in need should be advised to apply for re-certification for W. P. A. to the public relief agency.

HOUSE BALLOTS FOR INCREASED ARMED FORCES

Foreign Policy Of F. D. R.
Faces Grilling Before Bill's Approval

500 fighting planes with American factories.

Did the Frenchmen learn American military secrets? Is the administration following an unnatural policy in aiding one group of nations over others?—These were questions some committeemen said they want answered.

Passed by the house late yesterday by a vote of 367 to 15, the aviation-Panama Canal bill represented "part one" of the administration's gigantic armaments program. "Part two"—the Vinson bill, providing $68,400,000 for Atlantic and Pacific air bases, including $5,000,000 for military preparation of Guam, the tiny Pacific island, will be placed before the house next week. The Republicans lost, 183 to 136, in an attempt to have the house spread the aviation expansion bill over a period of three years. Behind a fervent patriotic plea by Majority Leader Rayburn, the house Democrats bowled over the G.O.P., and won approval of acquisition of 3,032 additional war planes as fast as the administration can obtain them.

Expansions Provided

These 3,032 planes will bring the army's air force up to 5,500 planes and cost about $300,000,000. The bill also would expand the present regular army of 165,000 by 40,000 officers and men, bringing the total strength up to 205,000. It provides a $27,000,000 program to increase the defenses and garrison at the Panama Canal and $34,500,000 for immediate "educational orders" to private industry, with a proviso that $2,000,000 be spent similarly each year for the next four years.

BENES DECLARES DEMOCRACY TO RULE IN EUROPE

CHICAGO, Feb. 16—An early war in Europe can easily be avoided, Dr. Edward Benes, known as the "smartest little statesman" in Europe when he was president of Czechoslovakia, said today.

"But," he added soberly, "that is no sign it will be avoided."

Preparing to give a series of lectures at the University of Chicago, Dr. Benes declared he was confident that democracy will eventually triumph in Europe.

"History," he explained, "shows that liberty and authoritarianism come in alternate cycles in Europe. The day will come when the democracies will stand firm."

Dr. Benes was given a roaring welcome by 10,000 of his countrymen on his arrival yesterday. Other hundreds lined the streets as he was driven from the train to the City Hall where he was given an official reception by Mayor Edward J. Kelly.

"Chicago welcomes you, with open arms, both as a man and as a representative of Czechoslovakia. May I tell you that Chicago is yours?" said the mayor.

Dr. Benes will begin his lectures at the university on Monday under the Charles R. Walgreen foundation and will remain on the campus about four months. He is expected to discuss chiefly the development of democracy during the 19th and 20th centuries.

CZECHS ARREST 200 IN PLOT TO HIT GOVERNMENT

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 16—More than 200 members of secret Fascist and allied Czechoslovakian organizations were under arrest today as police carried out a widespread roundup after discovering an alleged conspiracy against the government.

The plot first came to light, authorities said, when several young men were arrested during military exercises at Brno.

Confiscated documents showed the organizations were preparing acts of violence, particularly against Jews, officials claimed. Still more arrests were believed imminent.

YOUTH, 16, ARRESTED

Carle Thomas, 16, who had been residing near Oakland recently, was returned to the Columbus institution for feeble minded Wednesday night after his arrest by police with a bicycle reported stolen from Eugene Ault-house, Stoutsville. Police said the bicycle was taken from the Stoutsville school. Thomas was arrested along Route 23 near Valley View when enroute to Columbus.

Capone Can't Return As Crime King, Says Prosecutor Who Broke His Gang

CHICAGO, Feb. 16—Although on the last leg of his penitentiary sentence "Scarface Al" Capone, erstwhile overlord of crime and vice here and the nation's first Public Enemy No. 1, never will be able to restore himself to a role of prominence in the underworld.

His top ranking associates, without exception, also have served sentences for income tax evasion, and several of them now repose in their graves. The immunity from the law that Capone was able to insure them has been permanently blasted. This was the candid comment expressed by George E. Q. Johnson, former federal judge and the government's prosecutor in the case against the kingpin of the greatest crime enterprise in American annals.

Freedom in 1940?

The current prospect is that he will be granted freedom on Jan. 19, 1940. It has been expected by members of his family here that he would be released this month with the maximum allowance for good behavior on the 10-year sentence imposed by Federal Judge George A. Wilkerson. John, his youngest brother, has indicated that the balance of the $50,000 and costs fine will be remitted upon assurance of his release. Through Capone's lawyer, Abraham Teitelbaum, John has paid $37,692.29.

The government has assured the Capone family that "Scarface" will be completely hospitalized during his final year in the penitentiary. He is reported to be suffering from paresis.

To restore himself to the throne of criminal power at the expiration of his exile, Capone would first have to reassemble his scattered and broken gang. This would be necessary not only to resume operations, but also to protect him from assassination, Johnson declared. Another necessary move would be the reaffirmation of an alliance with corrupt politics.

In none of these directions does Johnson expect that Capone will be able to make any headway, should he attempt to take up where he left off.

In the argot of the underworld, Capone would be "too hot" to have any dealings with, Johnson said. The ex-king of the underworld here will be shunned and avoided.

Ability in Organization

Johnson attributed Capone's rise to power to his superior ability in organization. While most of his rivals are among the 1,200 victims of the murderous gangland era, Capone alone was able to command loyalty among his followers and was canny enough himself to dodge the death designs made up on him.

Capone was unable to avoid conviction for failing to pay the government a tax of $215,080 on the $1,038,654 revenue agents traced to him for the years 1925-29. Although the organization had a systematic means of destroying evidence, Frank Wilson, A. P. Madden and Fred S. Peabody of the U. S. intelligence unit established his gross income through bank transactions, business houses and other monetary channels.

The Capone organization felt a high degree of immunity through its success in intimidating witnesses. As to the government personnel, Capone never demonstrated any antagonism. Johnson said that the crime king exemplified the attitude that it was part of his business to keep out of the tentacles of the law, and failing, he accepted the punishment imposed.

Tax Is Weapon

Capone's conviction first exposed gangland's vulnerability to the law. The income tax became the weapon which shattered the prowess and morale of the underworld. His followers became frightened and dispersed when he could no longer guarantee them immunity from prosecution.

The evidence gathered for the Capone case was used to send prominent politicians, contractors and others to the penitentiary for failing to pay income tax on the huge sums they received from the underworld as "protection" money.

Capone's favorite diversion and leading promotion was gambling. Second of the gang's most lucrative enterprises was white slavery. The bootleg booze of the prohibition period ranked third, at best, as a source of income, Johnson asserted.

FLAMES BREAK OUT IN BIG DENVER BUILDING

DENVER, Feb. 16—A three-alarm fire broke out early today in the Mining Exchange building, large Denver office structure.

The fire started on the upper floors, where the first alarm was turned in, and spread rapidly to lower floors.

Second and third, alarms were turned in when the blaze defied the efforts of firefighters and continued to eat its way through the building, one of the early downtown office buildings. The burning building is in the heart of the business district.

Snow, lashed by a sharp wind, hampered firefighters.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—A freak rain and snow laden gale that lashed the eastern half of the country spent its force early today leaving death and destruction in its path.
Fears of a repetition of last September's hurricanes and tidal wave which brought a loss of 700 lives subsided as a change in wind direction brought an end to the storm.

Man Blown From Roof
Two deaths directly attributable to the storm occurred in New Jersey. Laszlo David, 54, was blown off the roof of his home at New Brunswick, N. J., while attempting repairs in the storm. Joseph Botts, 50, a fisherman, was drowned when his boat capsized in the Delaware river at Bordentown, N. J.

One man was killed in Alabama when the wind demolished his house.

Pennsylvania reported two deaths attributable to the storm. In New York city a record high temperature of 62 degrees for the date was recorded.

Buffalo and Rochester, N. Y., were blanketed by a three-inch snow fall.

A "twister" swept through the little town of Bath, Pa., demolished a theatre and a barn and unroofed a number of houses. Telephone and power lines were blown down. The sudden rush of rain waters trapped three W.P.A. workers in a Brooklyn flood sewer but all were rescued none the worse for their experience by heroic Fred Smith, a fireman, who swam 200 feet in the raging underground current.

Gales also lashed Alabama and the Carolinas inflicting considerable damage.

Thirty-three Circleville and Pickaway county women who were removed recently from W. P. A. when it was contended they were eligible for relief funds under aid to dependent children will be re-certified for W. P. A. positions, D. H. Marcy, county relief director, said Thursday.

In the list of those discharged only two were found eligible for A. D. C. aid, Marcy said. Most of the others have been receiving aid from the county since they have been unemployed.

Miss Virginia Smith, administrator of A. D. C. aid in the county, received a letter Thursday from Henry J. Robinson, chief of the division of public assistance, stating that until more funds are available all women with dependent children who are in need should be advised to apply for re-certification for W. 500 fighting planes with American factories.

Did the Frenchmen learn American military secrets? Is the administration following an unnatural policy in aiding one group of nations over others?—These were questions some committeemen said they want answered.

Passed by the house late yesterday by a vote of 367 to 15, the aviation-Panama Canal bill represented "part one" of the administration's gigantic armaments program. "Part two"—the Vinson bill, providing $68,400,000 for Atlantic and Pacific air bases, including $5,000,000 for military preparation of Guam, the tiny Pacific island, will be placed before the house next week. The Republicans lost, 183 to 136, in an attempt to have the house spread the aviation expansion bill over a period of three years. Behind a fervent patriotic plea by Majority Leader Rayburn, the house Democrats bowed over the G.O.P., and won approval of acquisition of 3,032 additional war planes as fast as the administration can obtain them.

Expansions Provided

These 3,032 planes will bring the army's air force up to 5,500 planes and cost about $300,000,000. The bill also would expand the present regular army of 165,000 by 40,000 officers and men, bringing the total strength up to 205,000. It provides a $27,000,000 program to increase the defenses and garrison at the Panama Canal and $34,500,000 for immediate "educational orders" to private industry, with a proviso that $2,000,000 be spent similarly each year for the next four years.

BENES DECLARES DEMOCRACY TO RULE IN EUROPE

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—An early war in Europe can easily be avoided, Dr. Edward Benes, known as the "smartest little statesman" in Europe when he was president of Czechoslovakia, said today.

"But," he added soberly, "that is no sign it will be avoided."

Preparing to give a series of lectures at the University of Chicago, Dr. Benes declared he was confident that democracy will eventually triumph in Europe.

"History," he explained, "shows that liberty and authoritarianism come in alternate cycles in Europe. The day will come when the democracies will stand firm."

Dr. Benes was given a roaring welcome by 10,000 of his countrymen on his arrival yesterday. Other hundreds lined the streets as he was driven from the train to the City Hall where he was given an official reception by Mayor Edward J. Kelly.

"Chicago welcomes you, with open arms, both as a man and as a representative of Czechoslovakia. May I tell you that Chicago is yours?" said the mayor.

Dr. Benes will begin his lectures at the university on Monday under the Charles R. Walgreen foundation and will remain on the campus about four months. He is expected to discuss chiefly the development of democracy during the 19th and 20th centuries.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 16.—More than 200 members of secret Fascist and allied Czechoslovakian organizations were under arrest today as police carried out a widespread roundup after discovering an alleged conspiracy against the government.

The plot first came to light, authorities said, when several young men were arrested during military exercises at Brno.

Confiscated documents showed the organizations were preparing acts of violence, particularly against Jews, officials claimed. Still more arrests were believed imminent.

Use Peanut Butter In Recipes

HERE ARE more peanut butter recipes, given because a previous batch went over so well. Peanut butter is a nourishing ingredient in cooking and can be used to make some delicious sweets and desserts.

Peanut Butter Spanish Cream is a splendid party dessert; the recipe given here is for 10 portions. Use one and one-half cups milk, scalded, one tablespoon gelatin, two tablespoons cold water, two egg yolks, well beaten, one-half cup sugar, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one-half cup peanut butter, one cup cold milk, one-half teaspoon vanilla, two egg whites and two tablespoons sugar. Sprinkle gelatin over cold water, soak about five minutes. Add small amount of heated milk, stirring well. Add to remaining milk (in double boiler). Combine egg yolks, one-third cup sugar and salt; blend thoroughly. Add a small amount of milk mixture, stirring well. Return to double boiler and cook for about five minutes or until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Cool. Peanut Butter Mousse
Peanut Butter Mousse is another inexpensive party dish. ## FLAMES BREAK OUT IN BIG DENVER BUILDING

DENVER, Feb. 16.—A three-alarm fire broke out early today in the Mining Exchange building, large Denver office structure.

The fire started on the upper floors, where the first alarm was turned in, and spread rapidly to lower floors.

Second and third, alarms were turned in when the blaze defied the efforts of firefighters and continued to eat its way through the building, one of the early downtown office buildings. The burning building is in the heart of the business district.

Snow, lashed by a sharp wind, hampered firefighters.

COUNTY COURT TEAMS READY FOR FIRST WHISTLE OF TOURNAMENT

MONROE MEETS WASHINGTON IN INITIAL EVENT

Top Three Teams To Appear In District Meet; Five Sessions Provided

ASHVILLE SQUAD FAVORED

Season's Record Makes Tall Harrison Township Quint Center Of Attention

Pickaway county cage teams were primed Thursday awaiting the sound of the first whistle that will send them into competition in the annual renewal of the yearly tournament. The tourney will close Saturday evening Feb. 25 after the fifth session, games being played Feb. 17, 18, 23, 24 and 25.

For winning the tournament, the fortunate boys' team will be presented a handsome trophy and will be No. 1 representative of the county in the district tournament being contested at Westerville in the Otterbein college gymnasium. The winning girl team will be presented a trophy, the county tournament ending girls' competition.

Not only will the No. 1 team from the county be sent to the district meet, but the runnerup and the winner of the consolation tourney, meaning the No. 2 and No. 3 teams, will go also. Because of the manner in which Pickaway county teams have been placed for the annual tournament it is highly probable that the county will be represented by its strongest triumvirate in the district event. Just what three teams are strongest will have to be decided in the tournament.

Eyes On Ashville

All eyes are on the tall team representing Ashville, Al Kauber's boys being undefeated in county competition. The Harrison township lads have won from each team in the county and in only a couple of instances has the team been pressed.

Ashville's team features a thrilling style of play, all five of the starters being especially adapted to the type of play taught by Coach Kauber. In Gregg, Walden and Roese, Kauber has three outstanding performers, while Hoover and Nance, who complete the starting five, have important jobs.

Looking over the other contenders from various angles, it is found that Pickaway, Scioto, New Holland and Muhlenberg must be considered. All four teams play good ball, especially in the tournament and either is capable of taking the favored Ashville team should the Harrison lads meet some misfortune along the way. Pickaway will not have Creighton Anderson, last year's star in the lineup, but another Anderson, named Junior, has been teaming with tall George Wilson to do some yeoman work.

Scioto has Beers, Yeavers and Trego and a couple of other capable athletes under a good coach, thereby presenting a definite threat; Muhlenberg has Snapper Ankrom and the Reid boys, and New Holland, led by Davis, a tournament favorite, must always be considered a dark horse regardless of its season's record.

Other Teams Strong

There are several other good teams in the county, including Washington, Darby and Monroe, and veteran tournament fans believe that anything can happen. The girls' meet, boiled down to competition between Darby, league winner, Walnut, Pickaway and Scioto, will be a honey with all four teams fairly evenly balanced. The girls are permitted to play only once each week.

The tournament lid will be pried off with Washington and Monroe teams digging in at 7 o'clock. At 8 comes the Darby-Scioto girls game, and 9 brings New Holland and Walnut. The windup Friday will be between Muhlenberg and Jackson.

Saturday night's card finds Darby vs. Deer Creek, Walnut girls vs. Pickaway, and Perry boys vs. Salt Creek.

Ashville, Scioto and Pickaway do not swing into action the first week, all three contenders drawing passage into the second round.

Tournament officials will include Jake Van Kanel of London and Chuck Weiner of Middletown, referee; Wayne Wilson, timer; Myron T. Johnson, tournament manager.

TIGERS INVADE BEXLEY COURT

High Cagers Hopeful Of Taking Margin Over Suburbanites

Circleville high school cagers near the end of their season's play Friday evening when they invade Bexley to meet the tall and fast Blue Lions coached by Carlton Smith.

Bexley is not so high in the Central Buckeye league because of the power of the Grandview and Columbus Academy teams, but the Bexleyites still have a powerhouse regardless of their losses.

The strength of the suburbanites is centered in Geist, center; Samuel, forward, and Bernlohr, guard.

Coach Roy Black's boys have been drilling hard this week in preparation for the Bexley game since a victory would put the Red and Black even for the season with the Greenfield game yet to play. Indications are that Whitey Davis and Harold Smith will play forwards, Paul Walters center and Warren Bumgarner and Bob Bowsher, guards, although Bill Heffner and Joe Staley have been working hard for a chance to move up.

The Tiger varsity and reserve teams were having practice games with BucksKnit this evening in the high school gymnasium.

BRYANT, KIMBALL AGREE ON CHICAGO CUB TERMS

CHICAGO, Feb. 16—The holdout from among Chicago Cubs players was broken today as Pitchers Clay Bryant and Newell Kimball decided together they would accept the 1939 salary terms offered by the management.

Both indicated, however, they had won the argument and that the contracts mailed back to them after they had been returned unsigned contained decidedly more tasty figures.

The capitulation of the pair left ten players still to sign up. Owner P. K. Wrigley said he expected them all in the fold without much further argument.

GLITT QUINTET STAYS ON TOP COURT LEAGUE

Purina, Eshelman, Caskey Teams Win Wednesday Evening Games

Glitt's Food Market remained in possession of first place in the City league, the Caskey Cleaners continued their drive toward a high spot and the Purina Feeds and Eshelman Feeds went into the victory column in games played Wednesday evening in the loop. The C. A. C. gymnasium was the scene of competition, a fair-sized crowd being on hand.

The Glitt team, defeated only once, had an easy time disposing of the Stevenson Furniture team in a 44-12 contest. The halftime score was 13-7.

H. Fausnaugh and E. Reichelderfer did most of the Glitt scoring with the former getting seven buckets and the latter five from the field.

Purina Feeds had little trouble with the Bach Insurance quintet in a 25-15 game. Purinas led 16-7 at halftime. Dick Melson, center, hit for 12 points to aid the Purina cause. Woodruff with nine points was high for the loser.

Eshelman Feeds, holding a 19-7 lead at halftime, went on to a 27-20 victory over the Wallace Bakery quintet. The Wallace team outplayed the Eshelman crew in the second half, but the first half margin was too much to overcome. Purcell paced the winners with 10 points.

Walter Gregg turned in one of the keenest performances of the year in running up 17 points for the Caskey Cleaners over the Coca Cola quintet. The game score was 39-29, although the cleaners held only a three point margin, 16-13, at the half.

Next week's games will find the Glitt team opening with Bach Insurance, Purina playing Stevenson Furniture, Wallace Bakery vs. Coca Cola and the Caskey Cleaners tangle with the Eshelman Feeds.

Purina Feeds had little trouble with the Bach Insurance quintet in a 25-15 game. Purinas led 16-7 at halftime. Dick Melson, center, hit for 12 points to aid the Purina cause. Woodruff with nine points was high for the loser.

Eshelman Feeds, holding a 19-7 lead at halftime, went on to a 27-20 victory over the Wallace Bakery quintet. The Wallace team outplayed the Eshelman crew in the second half, but the first half margin was too much to overcome. Purcell paced the winners with 10 points.

Walter Gregg turned in one of the keenest performances of the year in running up 17 points for the Caskey Cleaners over the Coca Cola quintet. The game score was 39-29, although the cleaners held only a three point margin, 16-13, at the half.

Next week's games will find the Glitt team opening with Bach Insurance, Purina playing Stevenson Furniture, Wallace Bakery vs. Coca Cola and the Caskey Cleaners tangle with the Eshelman Feeds.

INDIAN FORECASTS THAW

DE SMET, Idaho—Chalk up another point for the redman. While a radio announcer promised a cold wave on the way, Indians lounging about the agency looked amused and one old Indian weather prophet grinned:

"Radio crazy, chinook on way."

Next day the chinook came.

PLAN MONEY DISPLAY

BOSTON—Money the basis of all business transactions, will have a room all to itself in the Charles Hayden Memorial, new home of Boston University's college of business administration under construction. It is planned to trace the evolution of money from its early primitive state to its present paper and metallic form.

Purdue's Varsity Dark Horse In Conference

COLUMBUS, Feb. 16—Wild and unpredictable, the Western Conference basketball race today veered toward another hectic session with Purdue's dark horse five in a third place percentage tie with Illinois and snapping gleefully at Indiana and Ohio State who rank in that order.

Off to a miserable start at the season's onset, the Boilermakers gathered momentum and moved swiftly forward to cause consternation in camps of higher ranking rivals.

Built around a beanpole center, six foot five inch Forrest Weber, the Boilermaker quint has steadily improved defects, both offensive and defensive, which caused early season downfalls. Although not a high scoring outfit, Purdue counts on staging a thrilling stretch drive to the flag on the basis of its stout defense. Exclusive of Minnesota, Purdue has the best defense mark in the ten-team league.

Saturday's Purdue opponent is Wisconsin, currently bogged down in a sixth place tie with Michigan. Only a miracle will give Wisconsin victory and stem the Boilermakers' determined march for the flag.

Although Purdue has provided current discussion for rabid fans, the fact remains that Indiana, and Ohio State are in more advantageous positions and to overthrow them will not be an easy task.

Indiana's lead does not seem destined for molestation by Northwestern whom the Hoosiers meet Saturday night. The Wildcats have an average five but don't seem capable of upsetting the high scoring team they must oppose.

However, should Northwestern display tricks enough to overcome Indiana, Ohio State could step into a first place tie with the Hoosiers by defeating Iowa, its Coliseum opponent for Saturday.

Unwillingly entrenched in seventh place, Iowa has accumulated but two victories against six losses. Unless the Scarlet and Gray of Ohio suffer a bad case of unnecessary jitters this game should run true to form for a decisive Ohio victory. If Ohio loses its chances of winning the bunting will be materially impaired.

The other Saturday night Conference bout pits Michigan against Chicago. It can have no bearing on the ultimate outcome of the race as both the Wolverines and Chicago are out of the running.

DIMAGGIO TO PUT NAME ON CONTRACT AT $26,500

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 16—Joe DiMaggio, last season's outstanding holdout in the major leagues, will sign his 1939 contract within a few days, friends of the outfielder declared today. The only comment Joe had on the $26,500 document was: "Everything is all right."

First offered $25,000, he had been negotiating with the Yankee management for $30,000. After boosting their original offer $1,650, the Yankee bigwigs firmly announced that was as far as they would go.

Joe's friends said he had decided to give up his efforts to obtain a $5,000 increase. His long holdout for a much higher amount last year made Joe an unpopular gentleman with New York baseball fans.

WINN BACKS EL CHICO. PORTER'S MITE IN RACE

NEW YORK, Feb. 16—Here's a red hot tip from Col. Matt J. Winn, the venerable 78 year old impresario of the Kentucky Derby: The logical favorites in this year's race are, in his opinion, El Chico and Porter's Mite.

In New York today for his annual look-around, Col. Winn said the 65th derby would attract a record-breaking attendance of 100,000. He predicted nominations will total about 120, against 102 last year, and that about 20 horses would go to the post.

MAYOR OF NEW ORLEANS ADDS TO GOLFING PURSE

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 16—Placing $10,000 of his own money on the line, Mayor Robert S. Maestri today sent 20 of the nation's top golfers on the long quest for the Crescent City open championship.

Mayor Maestri doubled the amount of prize money he put up last year to insure an even classier field, and he was amply rewarded

Tales In Tidbits

By Bill Braucher

NEW YORK, Feb. 16—A warm day melts the snow, and immediately what do we think about? The grassy paddocks of old Kentucky, the crowds and banners and music and fun in Louisville on Derby Day, and the horses pounding down the stretch. Pounding down the stretch to make some men poorer, other men richer.

What's that little horse running in front of the pack like an electric rabbit pursued by greyhounds? Well, it may be a bit early to give it to you, but the Winter books are open and we don't want to see you pass up an opportunity. It's El Chico (The Kid), son of old John P. Grier, and he's winning it by four lengths, each up. The price won't be much in the mutuels, however, about $3.60 for your $2 ticket.

El Chico is the favorite in the Winter book, and you know what that means. And, the generous fellows who make up the odds seem to know even more than usual what they're about. For El Chico was the most likely two-year-old in years—since Top Flight went to the post, in fact. As a three-year-old, wintering in New York, he's still a little fellow, but he's as strong as an ox, swift as a bullet. What's more, they tell us this baby has "the look of eagles" in his eyes, and that's one of the things a boss has to have to win that Derby.

Last year the son of John P. Grier was undefeated in seven stake races. The little chestnut, bred by Leslie McCombs at Belair farm near Lexington, is so small that he looks incapable of carrying the high weights he lugged as a juvenile. Carrying these top weights, he hung up marks as a two-year-old which even Man O'War, Sun Briar, Top Flight, Whicome, Jamestown and others did not approach.

In a warm pro-amateur match yesterday, Johnny Revolta and Byron Nelson of Reading, Pa., split the $150 top money.

as the entire Winter touring troupe flocked into New Orleans for the event.

STARS SAY—

For Thursday, February 16
THE SIDERAL operations for this day seem to put the accent on private affiliations, with much stirring by the way of jollification, celebration and easy ways for spending in personal extravagance or indulgence. Be discreet in this particular, for in a business aspect there may be much to be gained by attention to affairs of importance. Diplomacy, tact, even undercover agreements may figure greatly to the advantage. Let prudence, not over-confidence, assist to major decisions.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a very important year, although major affairs, calling for decisive action and wise judgment, may be highlighted by much festivity and social celebration. But be wise in avoiding excessive indulgence and unjustified extravagance. Superiors and influential persons should be approached with prudence and diplomacy rather than ostentation, overconfidence and assurance.

A child born on this day may be splendidly endowed with business talents as well as social graces to make a fine success of his life. However, a proclivity to extravagance, show, boastfulness and self-indulgence should be dealt with in early life.

TIME NOW IS
ST. LOUIS—Day or night, you can get the correct time in St. Louis by telephoning Garfield 2511. The First National Bank of St. Louis has installed a machine which automatically gives the correct time over the telephone—day or night. The number is not the bank's regular phone number, but is a special one for this time service only. When a call comes in, a light flashes on the machine, stimulating a photo electric cell which causes a sound film to function.

JAZZ BAN LIFTED
BUDAPEST, Hungary—A four months ban on jazz was lifted recently by the Hungarian Radio. When the conflict with Czechoslovakia started, Hungarian radio officials thought it unfit to broadcast "frivolous" foreign dance music and Hungarian csardas-dances. Now that everything is quiet again the radios resume the daily broadcast of jazz.

GLASS GOES TO SEA
NEW YORK—"Around-the-horizon" visibility is featured in 1939 motor boat models now on display. Jay W. Smith, president of Chris Craft Corp., said yachtsmen, as much as motorists, demand ample vision for the pilot and laminated safety plate glass windshields.

The name "sardine" comes from the island of Sardinia in the Mediterranean sea which exports them in large numbers.

By Paul Thirlet
DJIBOUTI, French Somaliland, Feb. 16—Jealousy is at the bottom of Italy's demands for territorial possession of French Somaliland.

Jealousy that France has developed her East African territory into a commercially paying proposition without war or difficulty while Italy's newly won Ethiopia, looked on as the new Eldorado, is not only not producing but is becoming increasingly difficult to hold.

And this jealousy is becoming more apparent here daily. For it is here and not in Paris or in Rome that the tension of strained relations between the two countries is the most perceptible.

This was revealed clearly and succinctly by a native of Djibouti; not the average European's idea of the African Negro but a well-educated, well-dressed colored gentleman whose ancestors had been chieftains for generations.

Leader of Defense
And the task of defending this prosperous possession devolves upon one man — Governor Deschamps, a young and pleasant man, vigorous and with the piercing eye of a pilot—indeed he flies around most of his territory.

"Djibouti is the indispensable relay point of communications for the French colonial empire in the Far East and the Indian Ocean," he told this correspondent.

"The French government has efficaciously prepared the defense of this territory. Our greatest desire is to work peacefully under the shadow of the French flag. We will permit no foreign interference," the governor emphasized.

And although only two battalions of French Senegalese soldiers totalling less than 2,000 men form the total force of French troops in Somaliland, neither the governor nor his staff are downhearted.

Means of Attack
"There is only one way by which we can be attacked efficaciously and that is along the line of the Djibouti-Diredaoua railroad. The mountains between Harar and the coast bar any military advance and to the north there are nothing but volcanic rocks," I was informed by one of the staff.

In this one line of attack the two battalions of Senegalese troops are erecting their own little line of fortifications—scarcely a Maginot or a Marech line but which they consider sufficient to withstand the attacks of the 10,000 Italians massed on the Ethiopian border. And this despite their tanks and artillery.

Suicide. That is how it struck your correspondent. But the military on the spot said no. They claimed their anti-tank guns could handle anything the Italians could use over the terrain; that their machine guns would be able efficaciously to stop twice the number of men opposing them; and that the Italian light artillery could never shell them out of their hastily erected mountain fortresses.

But one thing seems to have been neglected by the French authorities—airplanes.

There are only a few obsolete models in service in French Somaliland and they are almost solely in transport and not military use, I was informed. The Italians have a considerable number.

Air Defense Lacking
Within a few hours, one native of Djibouti told me with the greatest equanimity, "Djibouti would be razed to the ground; its mud and brick houses would crumble; and worst of all the modern docks, built at a cost of 50 million francs could be destroyed without any difficulty."

"I don't think they will bomb Djibouti," one official told me. "If it comes to war I think they will concentrate on bombing the defending troops. After all, what is the use of winning the Somaliland if its assets have been destroyed?" he questioned.

But all is ready or nearly ready for a protracted siege just as in any medieval castle. Stocks of oil and gas; munitions and supplies have been cached—only the governor and a few military officials know where — ready for instant emergency use.

Djibouti will not be caught napping should war start.

SERVICE STATION OPERATORS PROTEST DISPOSAL PLANT RATES

ORDINANCE FOR FEES HELD UP BY COUNCILMEN

Liquidated Charges To Be Waived; Completion Set For April 25

The first complaint against the schedule of assessments for the operation of the municipal disposal plant was received Wednesday by council.

Councilmen read a petition from filling station owners and operators which contended the rates for filling station toilets were excessive. The petition said the toilets in filling stations could be considered as one unit and separate charges should not be made. They believed a charge of $12 a year for each toilet, or $24 was unfair and asked a 50 percent reduction.

Floyd G. Browne, of Marion, engineer on the plant project, said he believed the ordinance had been misunderstood and the charge should be $12 for both units.

The petition was signed by Ed Helwegen, The Crites Oil Co., by G. L. Crites, Groom's service station by J. E. Groom; Sinclair Refining Co., by T. W. White; Spur Distributing Co., by H. B. Hafey; White Rose Oil Co., by L. Leasure; Given Oil Co., by H. B. Given; Shell Oil Co., by Mrs. Anna Ruth; Circleville Oil Co., by L. D. May; Pure Oil by R. E. Ward; Helvering and Scharenberg; Sohio station by R. E. Norris; C. A. Leist; Pure Oil station by John A. Ryan; Shell Oil Co., by Clarence W. Wolf; Pure Oil station by Lyman Bell.

Ordinance Delayed
An ordinance establishing the schedule of assessments for the plant was not given a second reading Wednesday night. Two members of council were absent. Those present believed it would be wise to give residents further opportunity to study the schedule.

"I suggest we refer it to the committee of public service to consider the fees," Councilman William Reid suggested.

"Yes, we have had several meetings on the assessments and we seem no further along than we were at the start," Councilman Don Mason added. All councilmen approved the suggestion.

A resolution waiving liquidated damages and extending the time for completion of the municipal disposal plant until April 25 was adopted.

The contract with William Loomis & Son, of Logan, the contractors, provided that in the event the plant was not completed by Jan. 6, the original date for completion, the contractor was to pay as liquidated damages on the basis of $20 per day until completion. An extension was granted by P.W.A. Mr. Browne, told councilmen the plant could be placed in operation on March 1. He said the details to be completed on that date would not affect the operation of the plant. No date to start operating of the plant has been set.

Selection Urged

Councilmen instructed Mayor W. B. Cady to name a chemist-supervisor and three operators at an early date so the men would have an opportunity to study the plant details before it was placed in operation.

Councilman Frank Lynch was ford Millar Wednesday evening, told us that he would begin work Friday morning with the State Wild Game Department of Conservation, but that he could not now exactly outline what all his duties will be, but that he is sure he will not have charge of game wardens as it has been reported here for the last few days. Benford is one of "our boys", having graduated from the local high school with the class of 1913. Prof. Staley being superintendent. Mr. Millar is well fitted for the place to which he has been appointed and we all hope for his best success.

Ashville—
Our high school basketball team is county champions yet and if confidence means anything, it will stay put. But one can never tell for sure just what might happen. That old bean bag gets knocked over sometimes and away go the beans and if the cart gets upset the apples have to take it. But the bag's sewed shut and the lid on the cart nailed down, so the boys tell us, and with this all done, it's really no use wasting time like that having the boys go through the motion. But if anything bad should happen (but of course it won't) Ashville fans can take it.

Ashville—

And another something learned again. With much interest, read about Ed. Wallace's Honey Boy Bread as written by a correspondent for that bee journal "Gleanings in Bee Culture" which a long while ago, if our memory serves us right, was published at Medina, Ohio, by the A. I. Root Co. But it was not the bee journal that we were especially interested in. It was the approximately 18,000 loaves of bread turned out each week with 300 pounds of pure honey worked into them and named "Honey Boy" bread. And will wager more than an even bet that the majority of the people who see the "Honey Boy" words on the bread trucks, get the idea that it was some salesman's girl friend (wife it could be) who originated or coined the words. And "Made with Milk and Honey" is extra good advertising and if not there—Ed. knows best. He has proven that.
